Nation-Wide Railroad Strike Called for Monday

Human Chain Saves Boy, Firemen in D. C. Flood

White House Has No Comment But Seizure Appears Only Alternative

By The Associated Press

A Nation-wide railroad strike, set to begin at 6 a. m. Monday, was called by the two big rail unions yesterday immediately after White House peace talks collapsed.

Barring intervention by President Truman—which seemed almost inevitable—the United States walkout combined with the Canadian railway strike would virtually paralyze rail transportation on the North American continent.

Under a World War I Act of 1916, Mr. Truman could seize the railroads and operate them under Government supervision. Or he could get a court injunction to stave off the strike.

Negotiations to settle the dispute, involving wages and hours, collapsed amid bitter recriminations between management and the two unions—the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors.

Management issued a statement accusing the union leaders of "complete irresponsibility" and "double dealing." It said that the strike call was issued only 45 minutes after the union leaders had given assurances at the White House that "no further strikes" were contemplated beyond the five-day token walkouts that have tied up some key facilities this week.

"It is utterly impossible to make any progress toward a settlement with men who say one thing and do another," said the statement.

A union statement declared union leaders "have been forced to the conclusion that the railroads have not given and apparently will not give" the White House the cooperation it "must have to effect a satisfactory peaceful settlement."

It said the strike was called "in justice to the interests and rights of more than 300,000 railroad workers."

At the White House, Assistant Press Secretary Eben Ayers said there was no official comment and that no action was to be taken last night.

The 17-months-old dispute over wages and hours reached the breaking point less than 60 minutes after the White House had temporarily called off talks with both sides which have been in progress since August 7.

Leaving the White House, union and management negotiators joined in a statement saying:

"The case is deadlocked."

Union leaders at 5:30 p. m. issued the following telegram to Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman:

"Please be advised and advise

Rescue of Invalid Marooned in Flood

FLASH FLOOD—A 70-year-old invalid, Mrs. Martha G. DeGree of 123 Yuma st. se., is rescued from her flooded home by D. C. Rescue Squad No. 1, whose members used a rubber boat to carry her to dry land. In the rescue party were Sergt. J. C. Varah and Privates H. P. Ingram, J. L. Deaner and W. H. Helms

2.48-Inch Rain Maroons Many in Homes, Others in Cars, Stalls Traffic

More than a dozen persons narrowly escaped injury or death by drowning as a driving four-and-a-half-hour rain inundated large sections of Washington yesterday and paralyzed home-bound traffic.

As the water gushed over streets, and flooded cellars and homes, police and fire departments worked double time to rescue marooned or trapped residents and pump out the angry flood waters.

In one rescue effort, two District firemen were nearly swept away as they sought to snatch a 9-year-old youth from a 25-mile-per-hour current along Benning rd. se.

Human Chain Saves Three

They are members of Engine Co. No. 27, who were on a routine cellar-pumping job when they saw a 9-year-old boy, who had been playing in front of 4604 Benning rd., swept up by the current and carried toward a sewer opening.

Pvt. Edward L. Colbin, 23, grabbed the boy but was unable to keep his footing. He was swept helplessly along with the boy for nearly 50 feet before Sergt. Julian H. Robinson was able to grasp his clothing. Sergt. Robinson also lost his footing in the fast waters and five other men from No. 27 had to form a human chain to pull the three out. The boy, frightened, ran from the scene and was not identified.

Later three women had to be carried from "Bungalow Town" in Southeast Washington when Oxon Run overflowed its banks and flooded about 20 houses in the 100 blocks of Atlantic and Yuma sts. se.

Woman's House 'Rocks'

One of the women, Mrs. Annie Pearson, 48, of 140 Atlantic st., said she called for help when "my house started rocking." Another woman, an invalid, Mrs. Martha G. DeGree of 123 Yuma st. se. also was carried from her home as was a third woman, not immediately identified.

Residents of the "Bungalow Town" area said last night's flooding was the worst since before 1942. The area had been flooded both in that year and in 1947.

Capt. W. W. Brown of No. 25 Engine Company and his men waded up to their armpits through a driving current, checking houses in the area. They were aided by a crew of eight sailors from the Naval Gun Factory and by the College Park Rescue Squad. Both these units brought either boats or dinghies to the scene, but they were not used in the rescue attempts. Most residents chose to remain in their homes.

In Prince Georges County, where a "flash flood" imperiled several persons, a cyclist was trapped in Cedar Hill Cemetery when the brokes of the bicycle would not hold against the advancing waters.

Sergt. Richard Beall, of the Boulevard Heights Fire Department, said he reached the youth. James F. Gasnell, about 10, of 1834 41st st. se., when he had been

U. S. Newsman Also Hit

Churchill's Correspondent Son Wounded by Red Mortar Fire

Tokyo (Thursday) Aug. 24 (AP).—Randolph Churchill, son of Britain's former Prime Minister, and Frank Emery, an American newsman, were wounded by mortar fire in Korea, a public information officer said today.

Churchill, a correspondent for the London Daily Telegraph, was hit once in the right leg.

Emery, correspondent for International News Service, was hit in three places—the left thigh, side and leg.

The Army said neither Churchill nor Emery was wounded seriously. Both were able to walk.

Churchill and Emery were accompanying an American patrol across the Naktong River when they were hit. The patrol had started back when enemy mortar shells dropped among them.

One soldier was hit so badly that he was left behind.

Churchill and Emery were treated at a battalion air station, the Army reported.

Surgeons found a hole the size of a half dollar near Churchill's shinbone. Splinters were buried there.

Churchill radioed his father immediately when he returned to the press camp assuring him he was all right.

New U. S. Units Help Hold Line; Enemy May Try Move From East

BULLETIN

Tokyo, (Thursday) Aug. 24 (U.P.).—Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of United States Naval Operations, said today that more Marine ground troops and Air Forces are on their way to Korea.

Tokyo (Thursday), Aug. 24 (AP)—Korean Red pressure north of Taegu eased today. An American officer said the Communists appeared to be abandoning some other sectors in order to replace their losses in the bloody "bowling alley."

The "bowling alley" is a straight stretch between mountains 12 miles north of Taegu. The Reds have made repeated stabs down the corridor while also infiltrating on the flanks.

The Communists mounted no attacks Wednesday night. There was no response to a two-hour American artillery bombardment.

Cavalrymen Find No Reds

Indications that the Reds were withdrawing in some places to shove reinforcements into the "bowling alley" developed on the Waegwan sector 12 miles northwest of the key communications city.

From this front Associated Press Correspondent Don Huth reported patrols of the U. S. First Cavalry Division made deep penetrations into enemy territory west of the Naktong River during the night. They went forward without drawing fire. They also failed to find North Korean units in positions previously heavily manned by the Reds.

A First Cavalry Division spokesman said "they seem to be pulling out from in front of us."

He expressed belief that the Reds are slipping new units north and eastward to reinforce battered units. For four days the Reds have been hitting an American and South Korean line roughly 12 miles north of Taegu.

"Wolfhounds" Hold Firm

Red casualties in men and mechanized equipment have not been summarized by General MacArthur's headquarters. But the fury of the fighting north of Taegu may bring the totals up to those in the Changnyong bulge.

In the bulge, 23 miles southwest of Taegu, 12,000 Reds of the Korean Fourth Division were so cut to pieces that the division was written off as a fighting group.

Correspondent Huth said the durable United States Twenty-seventh "Wolfhound" Regiment north of Taegu held firm in all its vital positions. This regiment had been meeting and throwing back Red units vastly superior in numbers and backed by more tanks and mechanized equipment.

The Twenty-seventh is plugging the main road in the sector while South Korean troops hold moun-

Strike Brings Food Rationing In No. Ontario

Parliament to Tackle Tuesday Problems of Canadian Tieup

Montreal, Aug. 23 (U.P.).—Canada was on the brink of critical food shortages and industrial chaos today as a result of its two-day old nation-wide rail strike.

The strike of 125,000 railroad employes crippled the nation from coast to coast, for no other country in the world is so dependent on its railroads.

Food rationing began in five isolated mining towns in northern Ontario. Gasoline rationing was just around the corner in many sections of the prairie provinces. Layoffs totaled 100,000 and were rising hourly. All telegraph service was cut off and mail and radio programs were curtailed. Isolated villages in Canada's vast bush country said food would have to be parachuted in if the strike continued.

Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent called a special session of Parliament for 3 p. m. Tuesday to cope with the emergency. The air force and commercial airlines planned an airlift to fly most of the 349 Parliament members to Ottawa.

The government plans to ask Parliament for a compulsory mediation law in public utility disputes, which can be applied immediately to the rail strike, Cabinet sources said.

Frank H. Hall, spokesman for 15 of the 17 railroad brotherhoods who are striking for pay increases and a shorter work week, declared that the strikers "do not expect Mr. St. Laurent's government to bludgeon them into the acceptance of an unfair settlement."

House Action Eyed This Week

Separate Vote on Spanish Loan To Ease Path of Big Money Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

House Appropriation chiefs yesterday decided to put the Senate-approved 100-million-dollar loan to Spain to a separate House vote amid talk of a veto if the loan is included in the big omnibus appropriation bill.

A drive meanwhile opened to clear up remaining House-Senate differences in the long-stalemated money bill and push it through the House this week.

Sudden settlement of a row over rivers and harbors and flood-control projects, tallest hurdle in the path of the "single-package" funds measure, cleared the way for the delayed push, generally signaling session's end.

In the same breath, House Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) announced that the separate Truman rearmament bill, carrying 16 to 17 billion dollars in military and foreign assistance funds, will be reported to the House today.

The decision to ask the House to vote separately on the loan to Spain, vigorously opposed by the

50 of Franco's Guard Drowned In Freak Accident

Vigo, Spain, Aug. 23 (AP)—More than 50 members of Generalissimo Franco's personal bodyguard drowned in a freak boat accident here yesterday, marine authorities said today.

The men, here on a vacation, boarded a small pleasure launch for a trip to a football game. One fell overboard. The others rushed to one side of the boat to give him a hand up. The unbalanced craft turned over.

The Falangist guards—there were about 60 of them—were tossed into 10 feet of water. More than 50 perished.

National Guard's Training And Strength to Be Increased

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Substantial expansion is planned in the strength and training program of National Guard units not called up, Defense officials said yesterday.

This pending move to bolster the readiness of the Nation's major land reserve forces was disclosed as the Senate Armed Services Committee closed its hearings on universal military training. A favorable committee vote is assured.

Chief purpose of UMT is to provide a pool of trained manpower for the Guard and Reserves so they won't have to spend a large part of their drills and summer camps giving basic training to raw recruits.

But Pentagon chiefs say UMT cannot be started until the Korean war ends, so more drills, weekend training and probably additional summer active duty is planned.

National Guard leaders already have presented a program for increasing the strength and training of their units not called up. A Pentagon spokesman yesterday confirmed that such a plan is "in the works." It was submitted to the Army General Staff by the Department of Army's National Guard

Former Navy Football Star Killed in Korea

Commander Vogel, 35, Shot Down in Raid; 2 D. C. Men Missing

Comdr. Raymond W. (Sully) Vogel, 35, former Naval Academy football star between 1934 and 1936, is the first high-ranking naval flier to be killed in Korea.

This was announced yesterday by Pacific Fleet Air Force headquarters, which disclosed that Vogel was flying an air strike from a carrier when his plane was hit by antiaircraft fire. He bailed out at a low altitude but his parachute failed to open.

Vogel's wife and five children live in Annapolis.

During World War II, Vogel flew against the Japanese at Munda, the Solomons, New Georgia and Wake Island.

At the time of his death he was commanding officer of a carrier air group.

Earlier, the Defense Department reported two local men missing and a Martinsburg (W. Va.) youth killed in action.

Missing are Pvt. Donald F. Moriarty, 17, son of Mrs. Madeline O. Moriarty, 320 N. Bryan st., Arlington, and S/Sergt. Charles LeRoy Stevenson, 25, son of Mrs. Marie B. Stevenson, 324 Emerson st. nw.

This brings to 10 the total number of area men who have been reported missing in action.

Dewey Says USSR Will Use Formosa Issue as Weapon

Ottawa, Aug. 23 (NYHT).— Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York said today the Soviet Union will try to split the English-speaking world by inciting a Chinese Communist attack on Formosa on which the United States and Great Britain have taken differing positions.

Dewey added that this dangerous Soviet weapon must be blunted by taking the Formosa issue "forthwith" to the United Nations or a Japanese peace treaty conference so that the free world can decide exactly where it stands on the question.

The United States has warned Communist China it will use its fleet to oppose an attack on the island, while Britain has recognized the Communist regime in China, thus implying that the Communists may have a legitimate claim on Formosa, Dewey said.

Hoffman Holds ECA Was So Good Reds Had to Strike

Pasadena, Calif., Aug. 23 (AP).—Success of the ECA in South Korea, not United States economic and political failures, was responsible for the Red invasion there, ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman asserted today.

"The ECA program in South Korea was working fine," Hoffman said. "The economic recovery there was far better than our wildest dreams. Politically, great strides were being made along democratic lines. Communism was steadily on the wane.

"This, in my opinion, is the reason why North Korea moved across the Thirty-eighth Parallel."

'Please Bury Us Together . . .'

Man Follows Wife in Suicide With Same Kind of Poison

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

David Kennedy, 28, "a mild kind of fellow," sent out four identical telegrams: "Sweetpea is dead."

Then he went to his apartment at 3914 5th st. nw. and scribbled a note on a 5-cent pad:

"Only last request. That we two, please bury us together. We both wanted it that way."

Then he lay down on a couch where his wife had fatally taken poison a few hours earlier.

Clasping her picture to his chest, he drank an ounce of the same kind of poison.

At 9 a. m. yesterday police battered down the apartment door to find him dead.

This was written, in letters of double suicide, the final chapter in the Balzac-like tragedy of a "perfect young couple" from small Virginia towns whose marriage was ruined in Washington by "another woman."

Here is that tragedy, as told by neighbors and friends, of "the girl who was like a doll, with 200 curls" and "the sweet boy everybody liked."

David and Stella were childhood sweethearts. They grew up in neighboring towns—she in Clintwood, he in St. Paul, Va., both 725 population. Her father was a coal miner, his a farmer.

David was in the Navy in the Pacific. In 1944 they were married. They came to Washington and David got a job as an ironworker, Stella as a dime-store clerk.

Two Christmases ago David gave his wife a fur coat. On their last anniversary he gave her an expensive Bible.

Within the last year David had started having dates with other women. But he told his closest friend, Anthony Costello, of next door:

"Nobody takes the place of my wife. She's my girl. I'd never find another girl like that."

Said Costello: "He wasn't bad at all, like they're trying to picture him. He just . . . well, he and women were just attracted to each other. He couldn't help himself."

A friend said Stella was the kind: "You couldn't have paid her to go out with another man."

When asked why she didn't leave her husband she would reply:

"He's my soul. He's my life."

Although David had been having dates with other women, last Sunday a thing happened which had never happened before: One of them phoned him at his home.

David was out and the landlady, Mrs. Inez Overcash, took the call. But Stella found out about it. She told Mrs. Overcash: "If that

Truman Foresees Speedy Victory, Rep. Davies Says

President Truman was reported yesterday to feel the Korean war will be won "in a short time."

Mr. Truman's optimistic outlook was reported by Representative John D. Davies (D., N. Y.) after a White House call.

"We both felt the offensive would start soon and that the war in Korea would wind up within a short time," Davies said.

He said Mr. Truman "indicated" his biggest problem now is to decide whether American forces should chase the North Koreans beyond the Thirty-eighth Parallel.

End of a 600-Pound Sea Cow

Artificial Respiration Fails, Rare Fish Expires in a Tank

Philadelphia, Aug. 23 (AP).—A 24-year-old man jumped into a tank to give a 600-pound fish artificial respiration for nearly 2½ hours today, but the fish died.

At Seaside Park, N. J., 67 miles from here, Robert Volk's fishing net hauled in a 600-pound ocean sun fish, also known as a sea cow. It was some five feet long and a rarity in coastal waters. He promptly loaded it in a tank trailer on his car and rushed it to Philadelphia.

He turned it over to Harry R. Lindaman, superintendent of the aquarium here. The fish was alive, but none too active. He settled promptly to the bottom of a 9x18 foot tank.

"Let's walk him," said Lindaman.

So Volk jumped into the tank, the water covering his shoulders, and moved the fish back and forth. It didn't help.

"Let's try artificial respiration," Lindaman said. After a briefing, Volk went to work, applying pressure to the rear of the fish's gills, which are comparable to the human lungs.

For nearly two and a half hours he worked, but the fish just stayed dead.

"He was an aquatic animal," the saddened Lindaman reported, "and he was out of his element too long."

Lindaman, a real aquarium veteran, said the sea cow was only the third or fourth of its kind he had ever seen in 30 years.

The fish, Lindaman said, apparently was driven from its usual haunts at the bottom of the ocean by the recent Atlantic hurricane.

Some 400 persons watched the battle for the fish's life.

"He would have been a beautiful thing to see swimming around," Lindaman said with a shake of his head.

Save Beds for Casualties

Army Hospitals Close Doors To Vets, Except Emergencies

Veterans of past wars will no longer be sent—except in emergencies—to Army hospitals in this country.

The new policy, expected to be extended soon to Navy hospitals, was announced yesterday as a joint decision of the Defense Department and Veterans Administration.

The action was taken, it was explained, to clear the beds now occupied in military hospitals by VA patients for the homeward flow of Korean war casualties, and to relieve military doctors and medical personnel for Korean duty.

It little affects operations at Walter Reed General Hospital here, officials at the hospital said yesterday. At Walter Reed, they explained, some 2000 patients are under care despite the hospital's authorized 1600-bed capacity. And only 40 of these, described as patients requiring highly specialized care, are VA-sponsored patients.

The number of Korean war casualties already received at Walter Reed by yesterday was placed at 156.

Army officials estimated that though no VA patients will be discharged from their hospitals because of the order, virtually all of the veterans will be out within six weeks.

When the order is extended to include Navy hospitals, which will be called upon to accommodate Marine casualties in Korea, the Navy Hospital at Bethesda, Md., will take back its 265 beds now allotted for the care of VA patients, officials there explained. Some 217 veterans are presently hospitalized there under agreement with the VA.

The Bethesda Naval Hospital has a capacity of 1300 beds.

VA is presently operating 138 hospitals of its own, with a total of 114,000 beds. During this year, 12 more VA hospitals, with a total of more than 3000 beds, are scheduled to open.

First District Draftees To Take Oath Sept. 6

Army Enlists 10, Air Force 6, Navy 4

The Army led enlistments in Washington yesterday, as the Armed Forces here accepted 21 men for service.

Ten enlisted in the Army with six joining the Air Force. Four men were accepted in the regular Navy.

The Marine Corps enlisted one former Marine. Of 15 applicants for the Corps, one was qualified.

Meantime yesterday, the 430th Engineer Construction Battalion—first D. C. Army Organized Reserve Corps unit called to active duty—stood inspection at Fort McNair. The inspecting officer was Maj. Gen. Douglas L. Weart.

The District's first draftees—57 of the 25-year-olds—will report for induction at 7:30 a. m. September 6, District Selective Service headquarters announced yesterday.

Induction notices were mailed out yesterday.

District headquarters plans to make public the list of names on Sunday, after it is sure each man has received his notice.

This is how the 57 are divided among the city's 15 draft boards:

1-0; 2-1; 3-0; 4-1; 5-11; 6-5; 7-10; 8-0; 9-0; 10-2; 11-3; 12-0; 13-13; 14-7 and 15-4.

The different numbers for different boards—includng the oddity of 13—result from the fact some boards have more 25-year-olds than others, it was explained.

The 57 are part of the District's quota of 252 for September, included in the national quota of 50,000.

The first eight men from Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties, Maryland, are due to report for induction this morning at Arlington Farms, Va.

Nearby Virginia's first inductees will be 19 men from Arlington County due to be sworn in on September 19.

The District, Maryland and Virginia have already started to examine 22-year-olds, having run through the older men now waiting for their "greetings" in the next few months.

One reason the 22-year-olds were reached so quickly in Maryland was that more than half the older men called failed to pass their physical examinations.

The State draft director, Col. H. C. Stanwood, said 1787 men were examined up to August 14 and 964 failed to pass.

The State's 66 draft boards, he reported, have now classified 72,610 registrants in the 19-26 age bracket. Only 305 have been given occupational service under present regulations because they are veterans of World War II.

Hearings on a bill to authorize the Army to "draft" more than 4000 doctors who were educated at Government expense during World War II but never saw military service were continued yesterday before the Senate Armed Services subcommittee.

Senate leaders predicted quick passage of the bill, introduced by Senator Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.). It is expected to be reported favorably to the Senate today. Five similar bills have been filed in the House.

Army officials said that only one man in the entire group of 4000 had volunteered to serve in the present emergency despite the shortage of doctors in the military service.

Air Control Bill Passed

By the United Press

The Senate yesterday rushed through passage a stringent air traffic control bill aimed at preventing a future Pearl Harbor sneak attack.

It would set up a vast program of security controls over all airplanes flying near military concentrations and industrial production centers. Passed without objection on the Senate's "catch-all" consent calendar, the bill now goes to the House.

The new authority would be lodged with the Secretary of Commerce and Civil Aeronautics Board. They could name areas throughout the Nation where flying would be restricted.

The program would not go into effect until President Truman considers the country is close to a war emergency. Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) of the Senate Commerce Committee said the "drastic measure" is needed now to protect national security.

All aircraft would be forced to identify themselves as quickly as possible when nearing a critical defense locality. This probably would be accomplished by the use of radar and flight plans filed before departure, and would prevent surprise attack by enemy planes.

Civilian air traffic would not be grounded, as the measure states that one objective would be to keep non-military planes in the air on a normal scale.

Four local men who have been reported killed or missing in Korea

Three Washington men have been reported killed and 17 wounded since the Korean war began.

Pvt. Carl Williams Edwards, 19, of Berkeley County, W. Va., has been reported killed in action, his sister, Mrs. Gladys Christiansen, 1741 13th st. se., said yesterday. She said his family in Martinsberg had received an official telegram from the Army Sunday.

Missing Since July 20

Private Moriarty has been missing in action since July 20, his mother said. He is listed as missing by the Defense Department casualty list No. 72.

The last letter his mother and stepfather received from him was dated July 3 from Japan. He said he was being sent to Korea. He is a member of the Eleventh Field Artillery Battalion, attached to the Twenty-fourth Division.

Pvt. Moriarty moved to Arlington from his birthplace in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., when he was three years old. He attended Thomas Jefferson Junior High and dropped out of Washington-Lee High school to enlist in the Army in November, 1949. At one time he was a Washington Post carrier.

He has a half-brother, James, 10, of the Bryan street address. His step-father is a Patent Office employe.

Staff Sergt. Stevenson has been missing in action since July 30, his mother said she had been advised by the department. Mrs. Stevenson, a widow, said she last heard from her son in a letter dated July 13. He wrote he was being sent to Korea.

Sergt. Stevenson is a veteran of World War II. He served with the Eighty-six "Black Hawk" division in Europe and later in the Pacific. He was inducted in the Army in June, 1943, one day after his graduation from Rooseveelt High School.

He reenlisted about a year ago after studying at George Washington University and was sent to California, where he was trained for foreign service, his mother said. He was sent overseas with the Twenty-fifth Division, but was transferred to the Twenty-fourth when it was discovered he had certain special abilities.

Sergeant Stevenson has a brother, William F. Stevenson of Cleveland, Ohio, who is also a World War II veteran.

Private Edwards was the first Berkeley County born man still residing there to be listed as killed. He had been in the Army only since December 28. He was sent overseas in April, according to his sister, and the last letter received from him was written July 24. He said he was on Okinawa and expected to be sent to Korea soon.

Private Edwards was born and raised in Berkeley County and went to school in Martinsburg, later working as an orchardist.

3 Maryland, Virginia Casualties Are Listed

Three men from nearby Maryland and Virginia towns have been reported casualties in the Korean war.

They are:

Corporal Carl F. Seal, son of Mrs. Bessie L. Seal, Newton, Va., who was listed as wounded by the Defense Department Casualty List No. 72.

Corporal Charles W. Barton, jr., 19, Hagerstown, Md., whose parents have been notified that he is missing in action, according to the Associated Press.

Pvt. Charles C. Roberts, 17, Walkersville, Md., whose relatives have received official word that he is missing in action, the Associated Press reported.

Chinese Propose Pacific Pact Of Anticommunist Countries

Taipei, Formosa, Aug. 23 (U.P.)—Premier Chen Cheng proposed today that all Far Eastern democracies pool their resources to combat communism.

He suggested formation of a Pacific union patterned after the Atlantic Pact and deplored the British attitude toward Red China as the "weakest link" in the crusade against Soviet aggression.

Chen said the situation is of such urgency that there is no more room for "bickerings and past misunderstandings."

"The Soviet Russians fired their first shots of world-wide aggression in the Korean war and there's no telling when or where Stalin will push the button for the next invasion," he said.

"We must not bank on the mad dog regaining his senses. We must meet force with force."

Chen said the Far Eastern democracies must be bound together closer than the Atlantic Pact nations "under the same dynamic leadership as the United States has provided in Europe."

The Nationalist army is the best single organized force and its Formosa base is the most internationally secure country of the whole Communist-infiltrated Far East and must be integrated into the strategy for the defense of freedom, he sadi.

The premier said he would like to see Japan an independent country and given not only the facilities for self-defense but also an opportunity to become a real democratic country in a position to play her part in the task of defeating totalitarianism.

He said his government would support any United States move if it is finally decided upon to bring early conclusion of a Japanese peace treaty.

Best-Trained Combat Team in Philippines Ready to Go to Korea When MacArthur Calls

Manila, Aug. 23 (U.P.)—The Philippine's heaviest armed fighting contingent, the Tenth Battalion Combat Team composed of 1205 men, will leave for Korea any time Gen. Douglas MacArthur calls for it, a Defense Department spokesman announced today.

The force will be commanded by Lieut. Col. Mariano Azurin, 40, who studied at the United States Armored School at Fort Knox, Ky., in World War II and is a veteran of fighting the Huks in the Philippines.

The combat team includes a battalion of motorized infantry, a battery of 105-mm. howitzers, a company of Sherman tanks and a company of light tanks and reconnaissance cars.

Asked when additional troops will be ready to fight in Korea, the spokesman said "that depends on a lot of things."

He pointed out that President Elpidio Quirino offered 5000 to 6000 men to fight with the United Nations, but said there was need for further appropriations plus assembling and training the men.

British Unit to Sail From Hongkong Friday

Hongkong, Aug. 23 (U.P.)—Britain's ground forces for Korea, two infantry battalions, will sail from here Friday to join United Nations troops, it was reported here today.

The two battalions are expected to sail aboard the aircraft carrier Unicorn and the criuser Ceylon to join a battalion of occupation Australian troops in Japan.

MacArthur Turns Down South African Planes

Pretoria, South Africa, Aug. 23 (U.P.) — General MacArthur has turned down South Africa's offer to send a squadron of fighter planes to Korea because he needs transport planes rather than fighters, a reliable defense source said today.

The source said the United Nations accepted the offer and forwarded it to MacArthur, but the General decided he did not need fighters.

Red Planes Attack Two Ships

Rough Going Is Normal in Sloggerville

By Don Whitehead

With the Twenty-seventh Regiment (Thursday), Aug. 23 (AP).—The road from Taegu crosses the Naktong River and then winds across a deep valley until it reaches "Sloggerville."

That's the name given by correspondents to the area along the front lines.

That's where the fighting soldiers live—up in Sloggerville—where the slugging infantry is battling to save the city of Taegu from the Reds.

Death rides with the whisper of a bullet in Sloggerville, or the grump of a mortar or the vicious whack of artillery. But the infantrymen accept the dangers with a cool reserve of courage that ceases to be astonishing. And in the drumfire of the guns there is a never-ending battle of wits with the enemy.

Nobody Sleeps Much

At one point in the road a path runs across a rice paddy and into a rocky ravine where Lieut. Col. Gilbert Check has a temporary command post for his First Battalion. This is one of the nerve centers for Sloggerville—the mayor's office, the city hall and the telephone exchange.

Capt. Don. R. Hickman of Salt Lake City, Utah., roused himself from a midday nap on a blanket spread on the rocks. He rubbed his eyes and squatted by a telephone just as three mortar shells whistled in and burst on the bank above the narrow ravine.

At that moment, a telephone rang and a private reported to Hickman that Charlie Company was getting enemy fire into the C. P. from a group of Reds who had slipped into the American lines.

Hickman picked up the phone and called Regiment. "The North Koreans have broken in behind the lines of Charlie Company," he said. "Also, their mortars have started to zero on our C. P."

Hickman and his little group had little sleep for three straight nights as the enemy attacked with tanks and infantry.

"It was funny," a soldier said, "how you get used to going without sleep. I never thought I could do it. But you do if you have to."

Couldn't Come to Phone

The incoming calls came fast and then there was the vicious whizzing of bullets just over our heads. The reports from the companies said the enemy not only had Charlie Company pinned down but that the North Koreans had pushed on to the ridge above the C.P.

Charlie Company's commander, Capt. Alfred S. Burnett of Knoxville, Tenn., was unable to get to the phone. He was in a foxhole and had to shout messages to his telephone operator in another hole, who relayed them to the battalion command post.

Hickman alerted a company to get some counter-mortar fire on the enemy up on the ridges.

"They are on the ridge where the South Koreans are supposed to be," he said, "and they are headed toward our C. P."

Enough Is Enough

The officers and men hugged the stony sides of the ridge for protection from the bullets zipping down the draw. Finaly Lieut. James Betts of Flourtown, Pa., casually stood up.

"I can't put up with this," he said, "I've got to go to work." He was battalion communications officer and it was his job to see that all telephone and radio communications were open.

"It's a hell of a job sometimes," he explained, "trying to keep our lines open when they are cut by artillery fire at night. Then our equipment is scarce and is beginning to wear out."

A lanky lieutenant walked down the draw to the C.P.

"Where's that stuff coming from?" Hickman said as the bullets ripped through the weeds.

"It's coming from that highest peak up there," the lieutenant said, pointing to the peak where the South Koreans had been earlier in the day.

Hickman ordered an officer to go out and reorganize the South Korean troops and get them back onto the high ridge.

"This is serious and we've got to get them back up there," he said.

From the ravine, Hickman seemingly could visualize the entire battlefield, the positions of the enemy and the positions of the companies in the First Battalion. With his colonel away it was his job to handle operations.

Gradually the first battalion worked out of a bad spot with firepower that drove the enemy back. Charlie Company drove back the Reds who had infiltrated. And the Reds were pushed back from the ridge top from which they had poured fire down on the battalion C.P.

Life went on as usual in Sloggerville—the place where the war is being decided by the men who do the fighting.

Sailor Killed Aboard British Destroyer; U. S. Planes Active

Tokyo, Aug. 23 (U.P.).—The North Korean air force was reported in action against Allied ships for the first time today as American fighters and bombers began a second day of massive air attacks with raids that began before dawn.

The Fifth Air Force announced that two Russian-built Yak fighters strafed and bombed the British destroyer Comus at 9 p. m. Tuesday and that two other Yaks attacked a South Korean naval vessel in the Yellow Sea southwest of Seoul today.

(The Admiralty announced in London that one sailor was killed aboard the Comus, but said damage to the ship was not serious.)

American planes that flew 500 sorties yesterday in a growing crescendo of attacks against communications and ground positions began streaming from the fields before daylight, some of the fighters streaking almost as far north as the North Korean capital of Pyongyang.

Air Force fighter-bombers had another field day at the railroad yards at Sariwon, 40 miles south of Pyongyang. One raid blasted 10 locomotives and another flight returned later to knock out two more engines and to damage 15 boxcars and other equipment.

But most of the Air Force activity was concentrated today on growing masses of Communist troops along the Naktong River opposite American lines in the Taegu sector. By 3 p. m., the Air Force had knocked out two artillery pieces, two antiaircraft gun emplacements, three buildings housing troops and supplies and 600 fuel drums.

B-26 light bombers operated just behind the Communist concentrations, hitting Red troops and supplies at Sonson, some 30 miles northwest of Taegu, with 1000-ton bombs.

One of the day's most spectacular attacks was carried out by F-80 jets which rocketed and machinegunned a tunnel where Communist tanks were hiding south of Uisong, above the Taegu area.

First Lieut. Ralph S. Parr, jr., of Washington, D. C., said the whole flight "fired our load of rockets into the tunnel mouth and then went back to strafe it with machineguns. The ground controller who saw the whole show advised us he could see no further enemy activity in the tunnel."

[Lieutenant Parr's wife, Mrs. Barbara Parr, and his father, Comdr. Ralph Sherman Parr, live at 438 Turner lane, Chevy Chase. Parr, 26, was a 1942 graduate from Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School. —Editor's note.]

Canadian Tars Land on Two Red Islands

Ottawa, Aug. 23 (AP).—Canadian seamen from the destroyer Athabaskan have made two landings on islands off the Communist-held coast of South Korea, the Navy announced today.

In the first operation, a landing party from the Athabaskan supported South Korean naval personnel in the capture of an island. The landing force went ashore unopposed and occupied a village. The Canadian seamen later were withdrawn.

In the second operation Athabaskan seamen landed and demolished an enemy installation.

The Athabaskan has taken part in two other actions recently, the Navy said, on both occasions bombarding targets on the enemy occupied west coast.

The Canadian destroyer Sioux also carried out a bombardment assignment recently on enemy installations on an island off the South Korean coast.

The Cayuga, senior ship of the three Canadian destroyers in the Korean theater, was the first Canadian ship to see action. With a Royal Navy frigate, it penetrated a port on the South Korean coast

Kim Hwan O'Toole

Rations Help U. S. Recruit 'Rok Irish'

By Hal Boyle

Korea, Aug. 23 (AP).—There are some hard Roks with Irish monikers rattling around with the United States Infantry—thanks to South Korean patriotism and a few GI candy bars and cigarettes.

Allied Republic of Korea troops are called Roks in official United Nations releases.

But many Roks joining up with the American troops to fight the Reds are given Irish nicknames as well, in honor of the Korean's reputation as "the Irish of the East."

More and more Roks are being incorporated into American fighting units on a volunteer basis.

Wear Names on Chest

The South Korean rookies proudly wear their Irish nicknames of GI christening on white cloth badges pinned to their breasts for identification purposes.

And they answer to them at roll call in the First Battalion of the United States Seventh Cavalry Regiment.

Thus Kim Hwan Row may become a Kimmie O'Toole or a Reilly and Hak Choo Kang answers to the name of Ryan or Kilroy in an accent no son of Erin would ever recognize. They are about as Irish as the Notre Dame lineup.

But they are first-class fighting men in "Clainos Clouters," a battalion commanded by Lieut. Col. Peter D. Clainos of Manchester, N. H. His men are known as "the Firemen of the Western Front" because of their emergency rides to backstop holes in the Allied Naktong River defense line.

The Eighth Army has under way a program to integrate South Korean soldiers with each American unit. But "Pistol Pete" Clainos didn't wait for trained Republic of Korea soldiers to be assigned to him.

Rations Lure Volunteers

His men had been impressed by the sturdy help given them by volunteer native bearers in battle. So they went into Taegu to seek volunteers who would join them as actual fighting men. They got six members of the Korean constabulary. The six were promptly issued two candy bars and two packs of cigarettes and given hot meals. That word swept through the city like a fresh wind across the rice paddies. Immediately the battalion was swamped with volunteers.

Colonel Clainos accepted 140 and established a "buddy system" to indoctrinate his Roks into American Army ways. Each Rok was teamed with a GI who shared every detail of his life with him—from cleaning a rifle to going to the latrine.

"There is no more effective way of utilizing South Korean manpower than by making their men part and parcel of an American outfit," said Clainos. "They eat like an American, dress like an American and cut their hair like an American. They aren't treated as cannon fodder or assigned just to fatigue details. They share everything just as if they were GI's."

No Pay Arrangement

So far no arrangement has been made to pay the Roks. But a regimental commander in their own army draws only $12 a month. And the Rok captain, Soo Whan Chung, says his men aren't worried about money. He is a stocky 25-year-old graduate of the Japanese Military Academy who has to be discouraged from enforcing discipline by whacking his Roks broadside with a samurai sword he always carries.

The Rok soldiers and their GI buddies overcome the language barrier by drawing pictures in the sand of their bivouac area of tanks and airplanes and other military weapons and learning each others for them.

One veteran sergeant undertook to teach a few Rok buddies the intricacies of poker.

"You know," he said later, "in some ways these boys learn too damn quick."

British to Take 86 Ships Out of Mothballs

London (Thursday), Aug. 24 (AP).—The Admiralty said today it will take 86 warships out of mothballs to strengthen the Royal Navy during the present international crisis.

Ships which will be refitted for active sea duty include 7 destroyers, 9 frigates and 16 minesweepers. The other vessels are small craft, such as motor torpedo boats, landing craft and salvage boats.

Better Tanks Are in Works, Army Reveals

Tank for tank, the heavier American models fighting in Korea were reported yesterday to be more than a match for the best the Communists have thrown against them.

Army officials who made this claim also said a new light tank gun which will be available shortly should be able to "handle any Russian medium tank."

Much of the Korean Reds' early success was attributed to superior tanks. United States forces had few tanks and front-line dispatches reported the General Chaffee, the first American model used there, was no match for the Russian T-34.

Army officers said the Patton and Pershing models rushed to Korea have proved far superior to the T-34, a 30-ton tank. They said under some conditions the General Patton's 90mm guns would give "considerable trouble" to the Josef Stalin III, the Red Army's largest known tank. It weighs an estimated 50 to 70 tons and mounts a 122mm gun.

Firepower Stressed More

The 47½-ton Patton is the heaviest United States tank now in actual production, Army spokesmen said. They described it as the transition vehicle between World War II types and a new family of three models being developed.

New military policy gives priority in tank design to firepower. Mobility rates second and protection third. World War II tanks stressed mobility first and firepower second.

"In any future conflict American tanks will not be inferior in firepower to any foreign tank," one officer said.

The first member of the new tank family, known as the T-41, will be produced by the Cadillac division of General Motors, which was alerted to the task long ago.

Details of this new light tank are still secret. Officials said, however, it has far superior fire control, sighting equipment and engines than any used in the last war.

Cheaper to Build

The new model's engines were described as being aircooled, lighter, longer-lasting and cheaper to build than any World War II counterpart. It will have an automatic gear shift.

Firepower will be stepped up, military men said, by improving the metal used in gun barrels and by new types of ammunition that "about double the destructive effectiveness."

The officer made no claim that any but the new light tank would be available for use in the near future. One officer said the Army had several choices for a successor to the General Patton and that the proposed heavy tank was still in the development stage.

Red Artillery Chief Deserts To Spot Own Guns for Allies

Taegu Front, Korea, Aug. 22 (Delayed for Security Reasons) (AP).—The 27-year-old commander of a Red Korean artillery regiment walked up to the South Korean lines today with a white flag and surrendered. He is the highest-ranked enemy in Allied hands.

"I don't want to see all Korea run the way the Communists now run North Korea," said the commander, a lieutenant colonel. "I don't like the way they treat human beings."

He commanded the Thirteenth Regiment of the North Korean Fifteenth Division. Now he is spotting Red positions for Allied air and artillery attacks.

"Most of my regiment would like to surrender," he said, "but they are too closely watched by secret political agents in the army. No one can trust another for fear he is a secret agent."

He said another obstacle to a mass surrender of his regiment was the fact he couldn't get his troops together in large numbers because of incessant American air attacks and artillery barrages.

He came through South Korean lines alone near Tabu, 11 miles north of Taegu, after his personal messenger refused to accompany.

This defection by the regimental commander confirmed reports that morale is bad among enemy troops massed for all-out attack to seize Taegu. Another prisoner said he had fought for three days without food or water because of supply difficulties.

The lieutenant colonel pinpointed the position of his 22 artillery pieces hidden in an apple orchard. Fighter planes carrying napalm (jellied gasoline) bombs were immediately sent to attack the orchard and American artillery began to bombard it.

The prisoner said he had served in the Chinese Communist army originally, then transferred to the North Korean army after the liberation of Korea.

"I wanted to get out but couldn't," he said, adding that he had two brothers and many close friends in South Korea.

Pohang Airstrip Ex-Chief Wants To Be Sent Back

Cleveland, Aug. 23 (AP)—The man who ran the airstrip at Pohang, South Korea, said today he hopes he will be sent back to Korea.

Col. Robert W. Witty came home for a brief leave and said he will report to Washington for new orders.

"The last thing in the world I want is a desk job and I'd sure love to go back to Korea," he said as his wife met him at Cleveland Municipal Airport.

Pohang's airstrip had been dubbed "Cleveland Municipal Airport" because Witty and a lot of other "Clevelanders were operating it. The colonel had established the airstrip and obeyed orders to move out when North Korean forces entered Pohang and endangered the field.

"When we were forced to leave Pohang we flew everything out," said Witty. "There wasn't a thing left for the Reds."

Md. Civil Defense Head Transferred

Baltimore, Aug. 23 (AP).—Governor Lane today ordered the transfer of the state civil defense director from the 29th division to the Maryland National guard staff.

The governor said he did this because he felt it his "duty and responsibility" to require the officer to sever his connection with the 29th "and forego his present obligation to serve the country" if Maryland guard units are called up.

The defense head is Lieut. Col. David G. McIntosh, 3d, who served with the 29th division throughout the war. He was named civil defense director last January 1.

Taegu Pressure Eases; Reds Shift Troops

Few Infiltrators

A First Cavalry Division spokesman said the Reds may be shifting their strength from the Waegwan sector and also from the United States Twenty-fourth Division front further south.

These shifted forces, the spokesman theorized, may intend to hit sections of the line held by South Korean troops north of Taegu while the frontal assault is attempted against the United States Twenyt-seventh Regiment.

The Reds also abandoned their efforts to slip small groups over the hills during the night to bring machine-gun and small arms fire to the rear of the Americans.

The United States Twenty-fourth Division, which had teamed with the First Marine Brigade to wipe out the Changnyong bulge, reported no enemy activity Wednesday night. Their patrols roved through Communist territority without drawing any reaction.

Some Action in South

The south coast sector, where American troops held controlling positions in the ridges, blazed up briefly, Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton said. A North Korean patrol was swept back Wednesday about 6 miles from Haman in a short firefight. Haman is 9 miles northwest of Masan.

Swinton reported there were new indications of a Red buildup in that area where flat ground beyond the ridges leads directly toward Pusan, American lifeline into the line to halt Red infiltrators who had penetrated to within 8 miles of the supply center.

Should the Reds find a weak spot, they could pour the bulk of a five-division, 50,000-man, striking force through the hole.

The Communists also had built up a two-division concentration near Kosong to the south at the southern end of the 120-mile long battle perimeter. But here, as on the other end of the line near the Allied-held east coast port of Pohang, the action was subordinated by the critical Taegu fighting.

Latest front dispatches said Allied troops were hurling back attempts of some 1500 Reds to blast a hole in U. N. defenses by striking from behind.

And other reports told of new Communist losses in hoarded tanks which the Reds had kept largely out of range during the build-up stage of the Taegu fighting. At least 11 of the vital armored vehicles have been kayoed in the last four days.

Col. John Michaelis, commander of the United States Twenty-seventh "Wolfhound" Regiment, told Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead of the losses inflicted on the enemy's tank assaults.

For the fourth straight night, Michaelis said, the North Koreans tried to exploit gains by an infiltrating force which hit the right flank of the American line some 8 to 12 miles north of Taegu.

But each time the enemy was driven off, te colonel reported.

Associated Press Staffer Tom Lambert estimated the Communists have seeped sufficient forces through Allied lines to mount an attack in regiment strength of about 3000 men.

Air and ground bombardment smacked into the area where the enemy roamed as the big guns and planes made segments of the flaming front a no-man's land.

Fiercest combat raged along the Kumwha-Taegu mountain highway. All-day fights flared as Americans sought to kick the enemy off strategic high ground where sawtoothed ridges gave the Reds troublesome artillery positions.

In this area, Whitehead reported, the Communists sneaked a machinegun to within 75 yards of a United States medical station and artillery fire direction center. The Red ambush-type assault caused heavy casualties.

Waegwan Front Quiet

Lambert's latest front dispatch said the Communists attacked in platoon or company strength in several places Wednesday and that night. One of the attacks hit a United States artillery position 5 miles behind the foremost American position. Other night-prowling Reds sneaked to within 8 miles of Taegu.

General MacArthur's headquarters omitted the regular post-midnight communique. Presumably there was nothing new to report.

An intelligence spokesman at MacArthur's headquarters expressed the opinion that the enemy morale has steadily deteriorated as a result of incessant air strikes.

Near Waegwan, on the central front, Lambert said the situation was "relatively quiet."

There the United States First Cavalry Division and farther south the Twenty-fourth Army Division and Marines hold the line. Relative quiet also was reported on the northern fringe where the South Korean Sixth and Eighth Divisions are located.

Reds Siffen in Pohang Area

In the Pohang sector, the Republic of Korea's Third and Capitol Divisions continued forward drives although enemy resistance stiffened sufficiently to force elements of the Capitol Division into defensive positions in the Yonggi area.

While American forces hit advanced Red positions in the Taegu front, other United States troops —those in the Twenty-fifth Division's Twenty-fourth Regiment—beat back two Communist assaults of battalion strength in the southwest front.

AP Correspondent Stan Swinton said the Americans hold high ground and vantage points won in four days of bloody struggle and that Red pressure now is lessening.

Intelligent officers warned, however, that the Red threat in the southwest is still menacing because the road to Pusan, principal Allied port city, is shortest in this sector.

'Things Going Well,' General Collins Says

Tokyo, (Thursday) Aug. 24 (AP). Gen. J. Lawton Collins, United States Army Chief of Staff, returned from Korea today and said: "Things are coming along very well over there."

Collins said he is "well pleased" with the morale of American and South Korean forces. He expressed particular admiration for the rock-like defense of the American 27th "Wolfhound" Regiment in the battle for Taegu.

Equipment still is needed, Collins said, adding: "We have a tough job still ahead."

Taegu Line Holding

Associated Press Map

RED ATTACKS BLOCKED—Counterattacks by American and South Korean forces continue to block flanking attempts by North Koreans trying to pour the bulk of a 50,000-man force (A) through any opening in lines which might be made north of Taegu. In the south Communists built up a two-division force (B) in the Chinju area. North of Pohang (C) South Korean drives continued, although stiffened North Korean resistance was noted about Yonggi

French See Red China Aid for Rebels

Saigon, Aug. 23 (AP).—The French high commissioner's office charged today Communist China has promised to send five Red divisions to help Moscow-trained Ho Chi-minh's querillas in Indo-China.

The commissioner's office said it learned of the Chinese pledge from documents captured by French forces in military operations against the rebels.

Foreign observers here received the news with considerable reserve. French officials said they could not guarantee that the captured documents are official texts, but believe the information is correct.

The semi-official Echo du Vietnam said August 12 that the Chinese had pledged free arms to the guerillas.

Germans Urge Vast Europe Defense Plan

Bonn, Aug. 23 (U.P.).—West Germany's two top political leaders called today for a vast build-up of Western armed strength in Europe and United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy promised that western Europe "must and will be strenngthened."

McCloy said the Western powers are seriously studying and making plans to strengthen Europe's defenses, including those of Germany. He warned against any underestimating of American military might.

He was commenting on an earlier press conference by West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, who called for troop reinforcements in Europe to counter the force of the East German "People's Police," built up by Russia, and thus possibly prevent World War III.

In another press conference, Adenauer's Socialist political rival, Kurt Schumacher, rejected the chancellor's "partial" steps toward rearmament as ridiculous.

Acheson Corrects the Record

Schumacher called for a "monumental development of American power in Europe that would be capable of waging an offensive fight "to the East" of Germany.

[At his news conference yesterday, Secretary of State Acheson denied reports Adenauer is demanding remilitarization of Germany and the re-creation of a German army.

[As he understood the situation from reports sent him by McCloy, Acheson said, Odenauer was pressing for a general strengthening of western Europe, but is leaving it to western European nations to determine the precise steps.

["The general strengthening of western Europe is a question on which we are all devoting the utmost attention," Acheson said.—Editor's note.]

McCloy Gives Assurance

McCloy said German security is "enhanced rather than retarded" by the present relationship between Germany and the West.

"Western Europe," he added, "must and will be strengthened. Defense of Europe must be a joint effort and strength will be achieved. This will include Germany and require of the German people and their representatives straight-forward and cooperative action."

Schumacher said: "The only conditions under which I would favor rearmament are if the Western wirld—especially the Americans—would defend Germany offensively to the east and seek a decision east of Germany."

Schumacher's stand today was even stiffer than his previous declaration that Germany must be granted "equality" before rearmament can be considered.

Adenaur, on August 17, proposed that a force of 40,000 strongly armed West German troops be built up unless Allied reinforcements could match the East German Communist "People's Police," estimated to be some 250,000-men strong.

Wants Strong Police Force

[At his press conference earlier yesterday, the Associated Press reported, Adenauer said he wanted a police force strong enough to guarantee the internal security of the Bonn Republic.

[The West German Chancellor did not give any specific figure for his proposed force. Diplomatic sources in London yesterday said he sought 65,000 men, and asked that United States forces in western Germany be increased to a total of 10 armoured divisions.

[The Chancellor said he was against a new German Wehrmacht.

["We have left the stage where we can think of a relative small West European country being able to depend on its own forces in case of war," he said.

[But Adenauer did favor the creation of a unified West European army, as urged by Winston Churchill.]

Guard to Be Expanded

Bureau several weeks ago and is reported to be nearing final shape for submission to the budget.

Maj. Gen. Ellard Walsh, president of the National Guard Association, told The Washington Post his group had presented two alternative plans to the Guard Bureau and privately to Senate leaders.

Plan A, calls for doubling the number of armory drills—from once a week to twice weekly. Twelve of the additional drills, however, would be held in six weekends, permitting full two-day training periods. The other 36 additional drills would be held in the evenings, under the Guard Association's plan. It would cost about 22 million dollars.

Plan B, Walsh declared, would cost about 170 million dollars, and involves expansion of the Guard as well as additional training. It calls for: (1) expanding Guard units to 100 percent of war strength for officers and 50 percent of full strength for enlisted men—approximately 20,000 additional officers and 90,000 more men; (2) three weeks summer training instead of two, and (3) additional armory and weekend drills as in Plan A.

President Truman's supplemental defense budget carries $17,600,000 for the National Guard. This is to provide additional weekend firing practice for individual Guardsmen.

Hershey Backs UMT

Before adjourning its hearings on UMT yesterday, the Senate committee heard testimony pro and con on the controversial issue. Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national Selective Service director, and representatives of various veterans groups backed the bill and several groups opposed it.

The committee scheduled a closed meeting on Monday to act on the bill. Backers of the measure believe it has a good chance of Senate approval before Congress leaves Washington. House action is unlikely unless the legislators are called back after the elections.

Hershey declared there is no conflict between the draft and the UMT as they have different purposes—UMT to provide a large reservoir of basically trained men and the draft to select inividuals from the pool for active military service.

Erle Cocke, jr., Dawson, Ga., chairman of the American Legion's national security commission, declared in a statement that war with Russia is "inevitable" and the faster we begin mobilizing the greater our chances of survival.

On the other hand, James Finucane, associate secretary of the Council for the Prevention of War, protested that UMT would not help in Korea and would be with us for decades. He declared that UMT would be a "gigantic reform school" which would push American youth into "lust, liquor and sexual deviation."

Elizabeth Smart, Evanston, Ill., representing the Women's Christian Temperance Union, warned against legislating "in frantic haste and in an atmosphere of war hysteria." She said her organization opposes peacetime conscription but does not object to it in war if trainees are strictly forbidden alcoholic beverages.

Marvin L. Goldberger, national legislative director of Amvets, backed UMT but wanted it started immediately—by calling up reserve officers to handle the training.

Bernard Witzler, appearing for the Jewish War Veterans, also advocated speed in putting the program into operation.

J. Harold Sherk, Akron, Pa., secretary of the peace section of the Mennonite Central Committee, and A. Stauffer Curry, of Washington, representing the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, protested the bill did not adequately provide for exemption of conscientious objectors.

Supporting statements of the bill came from Blake R. Van Leer, president of Georgia Tech, Karl T. Compton, chairman of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Perry Brown, past national commander of the American Legion and Mrs. Laura Goode, past national commander of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Red Students Hit AP, UP For 'Miserable Deeds'

Prague, Aug. 23 (AP).—The official Czechoslovak news agency said the second world student Congress accepted today a resolution criticizing the Associated Press and United Press.

The resolution said the meeting of the International Union of Students (IUS) had heard about "the miserable deeds of some of the press, by which the students at this congress were to be intimidated."

Wife Suicide, Husband Kills Self

SAME POISON—Mr. and Mrs. David Kennedy, 3914 5th st. nw., who committed suicide yesterday by drinking poisonous acid. David, called from his job to Garfield Hospital, where his wife Stella had been taken after drinking the acid, returned home after her death, purchased the same kind of acid, and drank it. Police found him dead at 9 a. m.

woman calls again tell her to talk to me."

Then Monday night David stayed out all night.

Tuesday Stella didn't go to work. During the day she tried to find out from David's friends who the woman was who had phoned Monday.

No one could tell her.

At 3:30 p. m. Stella Kennedy, the girl who was like a doll, with 200 curls in her lovely hair, went to a drugstore and bought one ounce of a poisonous substance.

She came back to her apartment. She wrote a note blaming the trouble on "another woman."

Then she drank the poison.

She came back to her apartment and drank it.

Mrs. Overcash found her.

One hour later Stella Kennedy lay dead in Garfield Hospital.

Costello, who was with his closest friend at the hospital and stayed close by his side for several hours thereafter, told of his conduct on leaving the hospital.

They went to the telegraph office, where Kennedy, "writing as calmly as if he were writing a school essay," sent out the four telegrams to relatives:

"Sweetpea is dead. Will arrive the 23d. Dave."

"This Is the End"

As the evening wore on, Kennedy's calmness gave way to an overpowering despondency.

"Tony, this is the end," he kept saying.

"God will forgive you," Costello would tell him. "Dave, you know, if they should bring every man in the country to judgment and question them, they'd find millions who were doing what you did."

"Costello," the grief-stricken husband said, "those girls didn't mean anything to me. I don't know why men do that. It's my fault, my fault . . ."

Costello tried to get his friend to come next door and stay with him, to keep him from the fateful apartment where his wife had drunk the poison. But Kennedy insisted on going there.

In that apartment of marriage and death, there unfolded before Costello's eyes a scene of timeless, heart-shattering tragedy.

"Dave looked at her picture. He pulled open a drawer and ran his hand through her personal things. He held her coat and stroked it."

The young husband refused to spend the night anywhere but in the room, and sleeping on the couch, where his wife had taken poison.

The last person to see him was Mrs. Leslie Moore, the landlady's mother.

At 12:30 a. m. Mrs. Moore, who had earlier taken him some coffee, knocked on avid's door. He told her to some in.

She saw him lying on the couch. He was fully clothed, except that he had removed his undershirt.

Tried to Get Him Out

Mrs. Moore, realizing the morbid nature of his staying in that room and on that couch, tried to get him to spend the night in another room.

David refused and she could do nothing but leave him.

Mrs. Moore did not know where he had gone. But sometime in the night hours before she stood looking at him lying on the couch and clasping the picture, David Kennedy had gone to a drugstore and purchased the same amount—one ounce—and the same kind of poison his wife had bought a few hours earlier. He told the clerk he wanted itas an "antiseptic."

At about 8:30 a. m. yesterday Police Pvt. Robert Reeves was going off duty.

He stopped in the Standard Drug Store, 3201 Georgia ave. nw., to gossip with a clerk.

The clerk told the policeman that he had just been reading the morning paper and had noticed a story about a Mrs. Kennedy's death. The clerk observed that a man by that name had purchased a bottle of poison the night before.

Pvt. Reeves called the precinct and a scout car was dispatched to the Kennedy apartment.

The door was locked. They battered it down.

The death-couch which had held the doll-like body of Stella Kennedy gave up the body of the man, "a mild kind of fellow," who knew her as a child and grew up to wed and love her.

At District morgue David and Stella Kennedy lay once more side by side.

Separate Vote On Spain Loan

State Department and the White House, was also disclosed by Cannon. The Missourian said that since there is no legislation authorizing the loan, House rules forbid conference clearance without specific instructions from the House.

The implied threat to veto the 40-billion-dollar omnibus measure if the Spanish aid feature is retained was relayed to a recent closed caucus of Senator Democrats by Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.), following a White House visit.

Robertson told colleagues Mr. Truman vigorously criticized the Senate vote to extend mandatory aid, through the Export Import Bank, to Franco's government.

"He said the Senate wrote so many restrictions into the (omnibus) bill that he was considering a veto," Robertson told the caucus.

The Senate's 10 percent horizontal cut in nondefense appropriations was also under heavy Administration fire, but Robertson said it wasn't specifically mentioned during his White House interview.

Republicans promptly poohpoohed the talk of a money-bill veto. House GOP Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.) said he didn't believe the President will strike down a bill it has taken Congress nine months to prepare. Representative John Taber (D., N.Y.) predicted Congress will override any presidential "no."

Aside from the highly controversial loan provision, the Senate's 10 percent nondefense cut and the $4,599,873,729 it provided for foreign aid are the only two major hurdles in the way of a full conference agreement.

Cannon told reporters House conferees are already on record as opposed to percentage cuts, and will restate their position in today's final conference rounds. He said he hoped the bill will be cut on the basis of departmental needs, rather than percentagewise.

A substantial further nondefense cut, in one form or another, apparently was assured by a House Appropriations Committee decision to abandon plans to bring out a separate "recision" bill.

The surprise House-Senate agreement on a compromise civil-functions bill, carrying zealously contested flood-control and rivers and harbors projects, involved a major Senate concession, making the President the final arbiter of what projects are finally constructed.

Under the compromise, none of the $686,000,000 in projects finally approved could be actually started unless the President certifies they are vital to the war effort.

The compromise further set up a new "criteria" projects now under way will have to meet if work is continued on them during the 1950-51 fiscal year.

Such projects will be continued only if they meet one of the following conditions: Develop power, supply industrial or municipal water in critical areas, reservoir projects that would be useless unless completed, important harbors or waterways or "protecting" important industries or major food producing areas, can be completed economically in the 1951 working season, projects that involve mainly the movement of earth and do not use critical materials.

The 686-million-dollar compromise figure for civil projects represented a 77 million dollar cut in the amount previously voted by the Senate, but a 56 million dollar boost over figures originally approved by the House.

Senate conferees meanwhile served notice they will accept no further cut in the compromise projects figure, even if an over-all reduction in nondefense items is demanded by the House. One said a further cut would render yesterday's agreement "invalid."

British Report Russia Steps Up Uranium Search

Berlin, Aug. 23 (AP).—The British said tonight Soviet Russia has stepped up its search for uranium in East Germany to a "frantic" pace, far beyond peaceful needs.

A ragged army of 300,000 German men, women and children has been drafted to dig the ore, basis of atomic weapons, the British said.

"It can only be concluded that the Russians are in urgent need of uranium for purposes other than peaceful reconstruction," the report said.

appear in today's closed door session. He asked yesterday for the opportunity to do so; he was invited to appear today, and will if other appointments can be postponed.

The subpenas for Lappin and Grunewald were turned over to the Senate Sergeant-at-Arms to be served, according to Gerhard P. Van Arkel, counsel for the District Committee and for the investigating subcommittee.

Shimon Identifies Lappin

Lappin has been identified in testimony by Police Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon as the man he trailed for Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) to hotel suites occupied by Howard Hughes, millionaire manufacturer, in 1947. He has also identified Lappin as the man Brewster complained was shadowing the Senator. Shimon, according to Chairman Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) of the District wire tapping inquiry committee, has denied any interest in the investigation then being made by Brewster's committee into Hughes' wartime plane contracts.

Grunewald has been identified in Shimon's testimony as a close social friend, and has been described by other witnesses as Shimon's intermediary with the Brewster committee. He has also been described as a former FBI man, and a one-time consultant, but not a full time employe, for Pan American Airways.

The subpenas were turned over to Deputy Senate Sergeant-at-Arms John Lacovara for service. He said last night he had not yet found either of the men.

Chief Barrett has previously appeared before the Senate committee. In its first meeting, Barrett turned over to Chairman Pepper the Police Department's report on Shimon's wiretapping acuvities.

Maher, who earlier this year resigned as special assistant corporation counsel and is now in private law practice, had been named by Shimon, according to Pepper, as one of the persons who showed ill will toward the lieutenant in the wiretapping complaints.

Maher is said to have brought to Chief Barrett's attention the information of wire tapping provided by Police Private John McHale, former Aide of Shimon who said the lieutenant refused him a summer vacation and instead put him to work listening to the Hughes' phone calls in 1947.

Van Arkel said he invited Maher to testify to the committee today after Barrett's appearance. Maher is expeced to accept the invitation, provided he can cancel a prior appointment in Rockville.

World Bank Picks DeVries to Head Resources Staff

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development announced yesterday appointment of Egbert de Vries as chief of the economic resources divicion of the bank's economic department.

Dr. de Vries since March 1947 has been professor of tropical agriculture at the University of Wageningen, in the Netherlands, and adviser to the Netherlands Ministry of Overseas Affairs. He joined the bank's staff August 14.

He will supervise preparation of studies and reports on particular sectors of the economies of member countries, such as agriculture, transportation and communication, fuel and power, as well as studies on trends and developments in world production, consumption, and markets for leading commodities.

L. P. Steuart & Bro., Inc. Brings Added Security to Washington With The First Ocean Tanker Petroleum Storage Plant for this Area

A World-Wide Fuel Oil Terminal

OIL FIELDS THE WORLD OVER ARE NOW "MARKET PLACES" FOR L. P. STEUART & BRO., INC. - - - History was made a few days ago when the first ocean-going tanker docked at the huge L. P. Steuart & Bro., Inc. fuel oil storage plant at Piney Point, Md. It marked the official opening of the first world-wide fuel oil terminal serving the Washington area exclusively! Yes, our new ocean tanker terminal is another L. P. Steuart & Bro., Inc. service to the people of Washington, because this direct method of receiving fuel oil shipments opens extra avenues of supply. In addition, it means greater assurance for the District's fuel oil users, for now we can make purchases almost anywhere we wish . . . refineries and oil fields all over the world have become "market places" for L. P. Steuart & Bro., Inc.!

NOW! 45,800,000 GALLONS FUEL OIL STORAGE CAPACITY - - - The expanded fuel oil storage facilities of L. P. Steuart & Bro., Inc. are now more than six times greater than the combined total of all previous facilities in Washington. In fact, except for our own Washington plant, just one of our new tanks has a larger storage capacity than this area's entire total formerly! The result is added security for the District's fuel oil consumers. Every grade of fuel oil from heavy industrial for commercial buildings, to light domestic oil for homes, can be stored in these new facilities!

PINEY POINT TERMINAL SAVES 230 MILES OF WATER TRAVEL - - - Before construction of our new terminal, ocean-going tankers unable to navigate the waters of the Potomac River, were forced to journey all the way to Baltimore. There the oil was transferred to barges which retraced the tankers' path down Chesapeake Bay (see map) in order to reach the Potomac and start towards Washington . . . an expensive, time-consuming, wasteful, roundabout trip! However, it was the only possible way previously, and during severe winters sometimes led to fuel oil shortages here, because the barges were delayed in making this long trip through frozen waters. Now with tankers unloading directly at Piney Point this hazard is eliminated, 230 miles are cut from the trip, and barges cover the short distance remaining in less than ⅓ the former time.

PIONEERS IN PROGRESSIVE METHODS OF FUEL OIL SUPPLY AND SERVICE - - - The most modern facilities, up-to-the-second techniques plus 34 years experience in the field, have all combined to help us win your confidence. It is you who are responsible for our rapid growth, that's why we are constantly endeavoring to enlarge and better our service. Our staff of heating experts and our huge fleet of trucks, both the largest in Washington, enable us to provide the same prompt delivery and skillful service anywhere in the area.

Kennan's Departure

Words are so often debased in time of leavetaking that there is difficulty in expressing the measure of the loss that our Government will sustain when Mr. George F. Kennan quits his post as Counselor of the State Department. He is retiring to the world of scholarship. Mr. Kennan is an expert on Russia—on its diplomacy, its history, its life, its language, and its psychology. But he is no narrow specialist. He sees and appraises Russia in the context of the world and the times we live in, and his interpretations, which are now familiar to the general public, convey as well as express the sense of values of a sensitive and balanced and thoroughly trained intellect. The newspapers owe him a debt for the readiness with which he has placed himself at their disposal and for his unflagging patience in opening his mind to them.

Mr. Kennan's words at a farewell press conference sum up his thoughts on the crisis in the country's relations with Russia. War, he says, is not inevitable. If the contrary is the assumption, then we shall assuredly create the thing we contemplate, for we should be "writing off the chances of peace." This is heretical doctrine to some of the Capital's hotheads who think of themselves as realists. It is Mr. Kennan who is the true realist. He has a better record than any official we know for "calling the turn," and the reason is precisely that he stands in sharp contrast to the squint-eyed in mind who go from one extreme to another, mainly as a reaction from disillusion. His dispatches from Moscow during and shortly after the war tried to qualify the naive trustfulness which at that time governed the policymakers. Not all of them have been published, but those in the White Paper on China indicate judgment fortified by events. He showed much courage in those days in correcting the ingenuousness of some of President Roosevelt's personal representatives. There was no hesitation on his part, for example, in warning the policymakers against entering into the deals that were made at Yalta.

This, no doubt, was one reason that he sprang to the defense of those of his colleagues who have been unfairly maligned since the collapse of Chiang Kai-shek's China. Their only crime was that they were prematurely right. Mr. Kennan had been prematurely right from Moscow, but the truth from Moscow, for a variety of reasons, became less unpalatable than the truth from Chungking. In his own quest for the truth, regardless of consequences, the clear-eyed and upright Mr. Kennan has been a great inspiration to the diplomatic officers, and he leaves an abiding reputation with them.

Crime And Politics

Democrats will see in Senator Wiley's letter printed elsewhere on this page a skillful attempt to put the Kefauver crime investigating committee politically on the spot. Mr. Wiley hints that pressure has been brought on the committee to avoid tackling the relation between crime and politics because high political figures might be involved. The Wisconsin Senator of course alludes to Kansas City, where the malodorous Pendergast machine is in full control of Democratic politics.

The committee has elected to try a selective approach—to investigate the crime situation in specific cities and then determine the links, if any. Miami was the obvious place to begin, because illegal gambling and racketeering are rampant there. As indicated in the interim committee report, investigators gathered a full grist of material on corruption and lack of law enforcement, enough to show in detail the operations of big gangs and their connections elsewhere. Leads now must be followed up, particularly the interrelationship between crime organizations and their infiltration of legitimate business. A principal reason why the committee has not yet held formal hearings in such places as Kansas City is that the pressure of work in Congress, as Mr. Wiley himself acknowledges, has made it impossible for committee members to be in several places at once. Indeed, Mr. Wiley has not found it possible to attend the hearings already held outside Washington.

Public hearings, of course, are only one phase of the committee's work, and to be effective they must follow detailed background investigation. It is significant that the committee already has men working in Kansas City. We agree with Senator Wiley that no group should be considered "untouchable," and we hope that the committee will probe the situation in Kansas City to the limit. But the committee's mandate is to investigate interstate crime, not to dig up material for partisan use, and it must set its own timetable. We have full confidence in Senator Kefauver's intention to conduct a thorough and nonpartisan survey of all aspects of the crime picture.

"Super-Duper Goats"

Home rule for the District of Columbia is very close to reality—so close that comparatively few additional signatures to the home rule bill discharge petition would bring the issue to the House floor. And no one doubts that this would mean final enactment of the measure passed by the Senate more than a year ago. An all-out effort to bring the matter to a vote before Congress adjourns is dictated by the national no less than by the local interest. Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., could contribute significantly to this result by a mere nod of his head; increased Republican adherence is all that is now needed. Only reluctance to sign the discharge petition, not opposition to home rule, blocks the bill. Yet it is only through the discharge procedure that the bill can be taken from the dilatory District Committee and brought before the House as a whole.

President Truman drew an apt comparison the other day between the speed-up with which House members signed the petition to bring the twice-a-day postal delivery bill to the floor and the slow-down that has marked the home rule discharge petition, pending since last October. Some 60-odd House members who signed the postal petition have yet to add their names to the plea for House action on the home rule measure. Yet the latter presents a much clearer case of committee obstructionism and a question of far greater consequence to the Nation.

Representative Walter K. Granger recently offered a pointed illustration of the practical implications of the District's continued vassalage to the country as a whole. He referred to a bill before the House to empower the District Commissioners to regulate the keeping of goats in this National Capital. The annual expense of handling such measures in the national Legislature, he noted, runs close to two million dollars. The failure to enable the people of the District to handle such problems themselves makes goats, he said, of the 150 million taxpayers who bear the cost of such deliberations in Congress. "The super-duper goats," he added, "are the people who live in the District who are being pushed around by this Congress."

The people of the country and the people of the Capital need liberation from this yoke. It would be tragic if that liberation were denied now that it seems so close at hand. Failure to act now will mean a recommencement in the next Congress of the whole long process of committee hearings and debate in both chambers. The problem has been exhaustively studied. The issue is crystal clear. The time for decision is long overdue. All that is needed is to let the House vote upon it. We urge members to add their names to the petition that will bring about that simple, democratic resolution.

Boiling Coffee

The Senate Agriculture Committee has poked its finger into a hornet's nest by approving a new version of the Gillette report on coffee prices. After the furor aroused in Latin America by the initial Gillette report, this added blast will further injure our relations with some of our most important neighbors—at a time when hemisphere understanding is most necessary. To be sure, the Ellender draft which was adopted tones down the original findings considerably, and it contains much useful material. Something very strange has gone on in coffee prices. They rose abruptly last fall, despite the fact that there was only 1 percent less green coffee on hand in this country. Undoubtedly speculation combined with hoarding and rumors of shortages to precipitate the rise, and something more than a subnormal crop may be responsible for keeping prices up. But the study by no means proves its insinuations that Latin governments are deliberately engaging in price gouging.

There might well be an increase in the margins on coffee futures trading, as the report recommends, and certainly better statistics on coffee throughout Latin America would be desirable. But the committee indulges in questionable prejudgment when it calls upon the Attorney General to investigate sales and storage practices of the National Federation of Coffee Growers of Colombia and other foreign coffee interests in the United States "and take any appropriate action under the antitrust laws." Likewise, members of the Inter-American Economic and Social Council are not likely to appreciate the suggestion that a United States representative "who is conversant with the antitrust laws" attend meetings of its Special Commission on Coffee. The recommendation that United States Government lending agencies take cognizance of the coffee situation is nothing less than a threat of economic reprisal. And the final humiliating touch is a warning to consumers not to waste coffee.

What the committee cannot have considered is the effect of all this on other countries. In Brazil, for example, the report surely will be viewed as an affront and will no doubt strengthen the anti-American forces of Getulio Vargas in the forthcoming election. Nor is there any very good explanation that can be given Latin Americans about all the stir over coffee prices when the prices of goods they must buy from this country have risen proportionately as much or more. It is especially ironical to have a call for an import tax on coffee come from the very committee that has originated much of the legislation to peg American farm prices and create artificial scarcities.

The casual action by the Agriculture Committee is especially untimely because the State Department had been assured that it would have another opportunity to present its views, and several Senators had given private assurances that the provocative parts of the report would be eliminated. Here is a disheartening example of the damaging consequences when an outside committee poaches on foreign policy. The best thing the Senate can do now is to disavow the report and see that it is promptly buried.

Maritime Board

With the expiration of the terms of the temporary members of the new Federal Maritime Board, this important agency is left with only one active permanent member. Vice Admiral Edward L. Cochrane (retired) is the new chairman of the Maritime Board, which handles the award of ship subsidies, and at the same time head of the Maritime Administration in the Department of Commerce, which administers the subsidies and manages the merchant fleet. Albert W. Gatov, former president of the Pacific American Steamship Association, has been nominated by President Truman for a second place on the Maritime Board, but has not yet been confirmed. The third position is still vacant, despite a great amount of convassing, and until it is filled the board necessarily must proceed at half speed.

Admiral Cochrane has a distinguished Navy record, culminating in his direction of the Bureau of Ships, and since his retirement has headed the Department of Naval Architecture and Marine Engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was a member of the President's Advisory Commission on the Merchant Marine in 1947. Mr. Gatov, though he comes directly from the shipping industry, is reported to be a man of considerable independence of thought.

In these appointments the President has tried a new tack. Both are men with practical operating experience in shipping problems. At the same time, both must be at some pains to demonstrate that their background does not circumscribe their views. The House Executive Expenditures Committee, for example, criticized the Navy, which is Admiral Cochrane's alma mater, for its willingness to lend its approval to unjustified subsidies. And until the advent of the President's reorganization plan, the selection of Mr. Gatov would have been impossible under the provision of law prohibiting the appointment to the Maritime Commission of any person who had been associated with the shipping industry within three years. These factors need in no way prejudice the stands Admiral Cochrane and Mr. Gatov may take, but they do emphasize the desirability of having the third member of the Maritime Board come from the public at large.

The new members deserve cooperation and best wishes in what will at best be a difficult task in repairing the michief of the old Maritime Commission and completing a housecleaning of the staff. All that can be expected of them is an honest attempt to administer the law as written. There is room for legitimate difference of opinion on what is best for the public interest in the encouragement of a strong merchant marine, but for none at all on the point that it, and not any private interest, must be paramount. If there were to be another scandal such as that permitted by the Maritime Commission, it would put any further governmental assistance to the merchant marine in extreme jeopardy.

GI Allowances

It is one of the inconsistencies of the limited war that family men called to military service so far have few of the protections given to dependents in World War II. Congress has done well to give high priority to action remedying this deficiency. The Senate has already passed a bill providing family allowances for dependents of enlisted men, and a House vote on a similar bill is scheduled for today. The Senate bill would require pay deductions of from $40 a month in the three lowest pay grades to $80 in the top two; it would supplement these with governmental benefits ranging from $45 a month for a private with one dependent to $75 a month for a master sergeant with three dependents. The House bill would eliminate pay deductions in the upper grades, leaving the soldiers themselves to make contributions, and would provide maximum governmental payments of $85. These differences can be readily ironed out in conference.

It is encouraging, also, that legislators have overruled objections to the allotments based on the naive ground that men with dependents should not be drafted. That may be desirable as respects selective service, but National Guardsmen and Reservists are called into service irrespective of family status. Indeed, in addition to enlisted men, many officers called to duty must go at considerable sacrifice to the living standards of their families. There can be no serious thought of attempting to make up such sacrifice. But it is also true that no one can give a full measure of service to the armed forces when he must worry about whether his family has enough to eat. The family allowances for enlisted men will at least mean that the dependents least able to bear the sacrifice will not be in want.

"Shadowy Thinking"

The Roosevelt civil defense dispersal scheme, mentioned in your August 21 editorial, "Shadowy Thinking," is about as practical as running away from a thunderstorm. At that, so far as I have been able to discover from the few announcements thus far made, the California scheme is no more shadowy than the generalities proposed elsewhere in the country.

Constructively, might it not be an idea to ask the people who know from experience what an air raid does to an urban community—Berliners, Londoners, the good folk of Coventry and Rotterdam? From them our defense planners could learn not a little that would surprise them. For one thing, terrifying as they are, bombs are by no means the most destructive factors of massed air attack on civilian centers. Far more terrible are the conflagrations that follow in their wake. It doesn't take much imagination to appreciate the difference between being killed instantly and being roasted alive.

Ringed about with Niagaras of flames, you don't worry about bombs. You can only pray for a miracle. The fire department? Don't ask silly questions. High explosives, preceding the incendiaries, smashed the London water mains as an obvious preliminary. Not so much as a trickle from any hydrant.

Eventually London surmounted this difficulty. Washington can do likewise. Just as London used the Thames, the District can use the Potomac. All that is necessary is to provide at, say, 1500-yard intervals reservoirs. (In London the cellars of bombed-out houses were made water tight and used as reservoirs.) Water pumped from the river could be forced along by relays of engines to keep all the reservoirs full. The scheme worked well in London.

Smashed gas mains create a different, and hardly less morale-destroying problem. It may sound inconsequential to the point of absurdity, but you try a night-long job of extinguishing incendiary bombs as they land on the roof of your house—and with the coming of dawn, discover you can't get a cup of hot coffee anywhere in the city! Boy! That hurts!

But there's a way around that major tragedy. Buy yourself a primus heater. It's 10,000 times more valuable than the millions of silly gas masks the British government handed out before anybody knew what would be really needed.

Productive Potential

Passing over Mr. Keyserling's attributing of illiteracy or ill intent to my letter of August 17, in his reply of August 20, I never advanced the proposition "that a true measurement of national output is to be obtained by subtracting from the gross national product taxes and certain aspects of the national debt."

I know you cannot measure "real" economic growth (whatever that is in current dollars.) But a productive potential which stresses only increased gross national product, even in constant dollars, and ignores the fundamental fact that none of us is being presented with a "truer picture of developments in the production of goods and services"—unless that picture contains what the State subtracts from the individual's income, both in taxes and by the sale of bonds—has set up no sentries to the boundary conditions which make the comparison of discontinuities meaningful. In other words let Mr. Keyserling define "productive potential" before he argues about it. READER.

Chiang And MacArthur

Since the so-called "Disgusted Chinese" (letter published August 17) has used this pseudonym, but claims to be a "100 percent American" when it suits his convenience, I will not, after this letter, waste any time to argue with him again.

The Commerce Department has no record of China's stockpile of aviation gas for the last few months. Nor has this office. It is inconceivable that other American or Chinese government offices would supply this fellow such data for such purposes. Therefore his figures deserve no notice.

According to the Logistic Handbook of the United States Air Force, each air base requires three million gallons of aviation gas as stockpile. Even had the Chinese Air Force had 4,200,000 gallons in July, as claimed, the stockpile would still be too small under the present circumstances.

Since the "Disgusted Chinese" has stated that he has not seen General MacArthur's official report, he has no right to insinuate that China is not going to pay for the recent shipment from Japan.

Controls Now

Whether we want to admit it or not, we're in a war; and now we must all pay for past mistakes of too rapid demobilization, false economy, short sightedness, etc. regardless of where the blame for these mistakes lies. However, the least Congress and the Administration might do is put politics aside and see to it that everyone shares the burden equally.

It may be true that some price increases are due to hoarding and scare buying on the part of the public, as seems to be the general trend of thought, but how much also is due to business people and their desire to gouge the public on the slightest excuse? If the average citizen knew he would be subjected to such gouging, there would be very little rush buying with its consequent increased demand and rising prices.

Although controls are certainly contrary to the concept of free enterprise, until enterprise realizes it also has a duty to the public, controls seem the only answer to the person living on a fixed and limited income. Aren't present unwarranted rental increases, which only a short time ago were refused by the rent control administration, proof positive of taking advantage of the public?

To the average person not interested in, or wanting any part of, Government favors or subsidies, it appears that legislation protecting the majority of citizens should be enacted, whether politically expedient or not, and that the good of the Nation should be put ahead of politics and personal desire for perpetuation in office. E. L. E.

Crime Probe And Politics

Your paper, like others, is to be commended for its close, albeit at times controversial, reporting of Senate crime committee news.

As you will note from the Congressional Record, I have praised the splendid painstaking job that has been performed thus far by Chairman Kefauver and the committee staff under Mr. Halley. However, I have constantly contended that there is a danger that the committee may concentrate so exclusively on local crime, local gambling and the tie-up with local politics that it may miss a far bigger ball insofar as 150 million Americans are concerned, and that is, of course, the crucial interrelation between national crime and shady national politics.

A distinguished newspaper such as your own with its excellent reporters need hardly be told that wherever you go, here or out of town, there are all sorts of ugly rumors floating around to the effect that the underworld and/or gamblers have made financial contributions to various national political campaigns. I have publicly reported the existence of such rumors. I have stated that in order to preserve the integrity of Government it is essential that we track down the rumors and if they are false, or malicious or partisan smears, show them to be such.

I think your reporters will be the first to agree, and other newspapers throughout the country will also agree, that the rumors are not all unfounded scuttlebutt. National politics is generally clean, but every group has its occasional "black sheep," and no group—not even the Congress—should be regarded as untouchable.

There has been considerable talk that certain sources would attempt to exert influence on the committee to prevent it from getting at high-up political figures. I am generally confident of the integrity of Chairman Kefauver, of my colleagues and of the staff in resisting all such attempted influence.

As you know, I have, of course, always scrupulously refused to make any accusations against any specific individuals (whether they be alleged to be Communists, criminals or of any other derogatory category) until documented evidence could be secured. I know that you agree with such careful policy. At the same time, I think that the existence of ugly rumors is news in itself, that the committee should not close its eyes to these rumors and that it is the business of this or any committee to keep its eye on first things first, on the more important problems rather than less important ones.

To take an instance, to go to Kansas City and to help secure the arrest of a few numbers runners or bookies would be an absolute absurdity if the committee were in the same process to gloss over the constantly alleged influence which the underworld has exerted on national politics.

To the maximum extent of our available time, I am sure that all members of the committee, particularly its tireless chairman, intend as I intend, to give this subject our attention. However, in my case, as an example, I often find that I have three lengthy committee meetings scheduled simultaneously and The Post would agree that no man can attempt to be in three places at the same time. But we are trying to do an honest, conscientious nonpartisan job, as in the instance of the first committee report on which my office worked in all its drafts.

Growing Hold Of Suburbia

By Malvina Lindsay

Peril Or Profit?

"SUBURBIA" up to now has been largely a theme for the humorists. But its amazing growth, as brought out at last week's National Planning Conference in Los Angeles, is bringing some headaches to city planners and to politicians, and opening a field of research to students of the American mind.

Despite all the warning about atomic zones of danger, pleas of the National Security Resources Board for decentralization, current talk about escape to rural hideaways, people continue to move cityward. Meanwhile, people in metropolitan centers move outward. The suburbs and rural areas around cities get the impact of both movements.

Nothing short of an actual bombing of a major city will deter the gravitation toward cosmopolitan centers, Robert Walker, Stanford University political scientist, told the planning conference. And Mayor Fletcher Bowron of Los Angeles feared that big cities might "'die" as homes and businesses were moved outside their limits.

From a political standpoint the urban movement is bringing too great governmental power to farm areas, Richard L. Neuberger of Oregon, writer and State Senator, pointed out. For most State Legislatures are based on districts determined in 1900 when 60 percent of the Nation's population was rural. Now this percentage is only 30.

MOST PEOPLE moving toward cities are doing so because their work takes them there. Barring a general decentralization of industry for defense purposes, they will continue to do so.

The suburban, or rurban (rural life just outside cities) movement, which has gathered momentum since the first World War, received great impetus in recent years from the great baby crop that sent young parents out of apartments into outlying homes or garden-type building developments.

Many retired people have gone in for countryside living. And many families looking to a sideline income from Mother Earth have become rurbanites, commuting to work in cities.

The suburbanite to many Americans is yet a cartoon figure of a plump, balding man racing for a commuter's train. His wife (also overweight) divides her time between the chain grocery and her club. Usually there are two very modern children and a maid. The house is comfortable, the lawn neatly tailored.

This is an upper middle income picture of Suburbia, and one out of which the prevailing concept of the suburban mind is drawn. Yet Suburbia contains millions of small homes with no maids and more than two children. It also has working wives who commute to work with their husbands. Some parts of it are filled with bleak one-room houses, monuments to unrealized architectural dreams, and with once-hopeful vegetable gardens overgrown with weeds. It has all kinds of people, and is a fair cross-section of life anywhere.

YET ITS growing importance is bringing new social influences into American life. People can no longer be divided neatly into city and rural types—slickers and rubes. In fact, the typical American may well be the suburbanite. What will he tend to become?

Some fear he will be too standardized, forgetting that radio and television are cutting people to a pattern everywhere. However, it is true that the tendency to build suburban developments designed for one type of family, one type of income, does hold a threat of what city planners call deadpan conformity. At least it prevents these communities from having within them the range of human beings in age and interests normally found in a farm neighborhood, a small town and in some parts of cities.

The suburbanite is usually represented as having a smug, little mind that never sees beyond Suburbia. Hence some fear the suburban American will be an inflexible, provincial "small towner."

Yet the suburbanite will quickly retort that he is free of the cold seclusiveness of the city's cliff dwelling robots and of the chip-on-the-shoulder suspicion of some farmers. He will say that suburban living develops in him all the good aspects of small town life—neighborliness, participation in community affairs, political responsibility, social and educational roots for his children—and at the same time gives him contact with the broadening cultural influences of the city; in short, makes him the best balanced citizen.

Dr. Andren's Talk

Under the headline "Punishment Held Cause of New War," I was quoted in an article in your issue of August 18 as having stated that "The present war is largely the result of victors of the last war punishing the conquered, etc."

In my talk on mental hygiene, I made no reference whatsoever to any phase of the war, nor its causes, and hold no such theory as the above. The statement quoted was made by a well-known physician during World War II, and was included erroneously with some material picked up by a reporter previous to my talk. The quotations were not made by me, nor were they made in connection with the present war. H. E. ANDREN, M. D.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Rearming The Germans

ENOUGH has already been said in public about rearming the western Germans to enable us to define the first big issue which has to be decided. We have to choose between two very different conceptions. One is that the west Germans should be armed specifically in order to deal with the east German forces. The other and very different view is that they should be armed in order to become the hard core of the ground forces aligned against the armies of the Soviet orbit.

Lippmann

The discussion has shown, it seems to me, that it is necessary and that it is feasible to proceed at once to prepare west German forces capable of defeating aggression, in the North Korean style, by the east Germans. The discussions have also shown, it seems to me, that the idea of recruiting the Germans as the shock troops of a European or an Atlantic army raises problems which, even if they are not insoluble, are certainly not soluble soon.

IT SEEMS to me reasonably clear that unless we deal first with the question of German internal security against civil war, we shall create only confusion. To authorize and help equip a west German militia strong enough not to be overcome by the east Germans is a limited but an attainable objective. To treat west Germany as a reserve of military manpower which can be drawn upon by the Atlantic nations is an unlimited objective. Under no conceivable circumstances could even 20 west German divisions be recalled, retrained, and reequipped quickly for international war.

The prudent and practical thing to do is not to bite off more than anyone can chew, and to approach the momentous question of German rearmament as statesmen concerned with the future of the German nation and state, not in the manner of recruiting sergeants drumming up enlistments.

DR. ADENAUER told us the other day that before western Germany could safely rearm the United States would have to establish a "protective curtain" of at least 10 United States armored divisions. The Germans say that they must be defended while they are preparing to defend themselves If we analyze this German argument, what we find is that they want us to be near a total mobilization with—for us—a large army already in Europe, before they mobilize.

This is very different from the fantasy of the wishful thinkers in Whitehall and in the Pentagon that the Germans have just what we lack,—namely lots of infantry aching and itching to put on a uniform and to start marching again. Dr. Adenauer's comment on this mirage is that first we should mobilize our own infantry and place it between the Elbe and the Rhine.

DR. ADENAUER has not yet spoken publicly, unless I have missed it, on the other German objections. It is that a German army of any size worth talking about can be recruited only by conscription. Not even the Germans, the most martial of the civilized nations, ever recruited their infantry by volunteering. What is more, no large German army can be raised, can be trained, and can be commanded except by German officers and a German general staff.

To raise an army by conscription is very near to being the ultimate exercise of sovereignty. We must not deceive ourselves into thinking that the government in Bonn, which lacks almost all the attributes of sovereignty, can or will recreate the German army before it has recovered full and equal sovereignty, including the recognition that Germany is a great European power with a foreign policy which is made in Germany.

My own view is that all this is going to happen. But it is going to happen, not in order to provide troops for a hypothetical war in 1952-54, but in the course of the natural revival of the German nation and its return as a principal power in Europe.

WE SHOULD encourage the revival of Germany particularly in close alliance with France. But we should not look upon the Germans, whom we have defeated and disarmed, as a reserve of military manpower upon which we can now draw.

The self-respecting and the practical thing to do is to arm the Germans for their own internal security. Until they have recovered full sovereignty, a greater military effort than that should not be asked of them nor can it be expected. For the time being we can leave it at that. Yet if only we could do that much, and do it effectively, it would add immeasurably, perhaps decisively, to the security of all of western Europe. For the greatest danger of a general war is the outbreak of a German civil war. All of us would quickly be sucked into a German civil war.

IF THE Western allies could agree clearly and firmly on this limited objective, they could then, I think, take a salutary and constructive action. They could reconvene the Council of Foreign Ministers and they could tell Mr. Vishinsky that they have decided to authorize and to equip forces in western Germany similar to those in eastern Germany though, of course, three times as large since western Germany has about three times as many people who need to be policed and protected. Since this would be following the precedent established by the USSR in its zone, the Western allies could say to Mr. Vishinsky that they know he will regard their decision as conforming to the Potsdam Agreement.

They should, however, add that since the existence of two German military forces is a danger to the peace of Germany and of the world, they would be glad to consider proposals for German internal security which recognized the principle that the German police and militia in all parts of Germany should be in proportion to the population.

Control Powers

By Marquis Childs

Sawyer Up, Symington Down

ON THE fifty-seventh day after the beginning of the Korean war the Senate finally got around to passing an economic controls bill. As hacked up by amendments, it may be unworkable.

Childs

Perhaps the most arbitrary amendment—certainly the saddest commentary on the state of our political life—was the joker put in by Senator Edwin Johnson of Colorado. Johnson, who gives the outward impression of being just a big, good-natured, grown-up boy, has extraordinary craft and guile in politics.

He also has an intense and almost vengeful dislike of the President. This is coupled with a healthy respect for the interests of big business, which he serves very well in the Senate.

The controls bill gave him a chance to take out both his likes and his dislikes. By denying the President authority over allocations and priorities, he could pass the insult direct to his enemy in the White House. At the same time he could do a good turn for the segment of business that has been lobbying to give all power to the Department of Commerce.

Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer is reported to have been not precisely a reluctant bridegroom. According to reports on Capitol Hill, Sawyer and his friends have been working quietly but intensively to make sure that the final power would rest in the vastness of the Commerce Building.

THEY would have preferred to have had this power through a presidential directive rather than by the present means which has its embarrassments. The Sawyer faction has aimed at setting up a kind of War Production Board in the Commerce Department.

It would have powers in virtually every field—not only steel and related metals, but utilities, oil, farm machinery and so on. Naturally this stirred resentment among other Cabinet members who saw their prerogatives taken away, and their stature in a defense economy reduced to the vanishing point.

But the official hardest hit by the Sawyer campaign has been W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board. As Symington has seen his role in a wartime or defense economy, it is that of referee. Each of the various Government departments would exercise authority in its own field as delegated by the White House. Then, when any differences arose, Referee Symington would step in to settle them. In order to act as referee, the NSRB head would, of course, require proper authority, and that could come only from Congress, or, at second hand, from the President.

In conference the provision tacked on by the Senate giving all powers to Sawyer may be modified or knocked out. If it is not, then Symington is left outside looking in. His job becomes the somewhat dubious one of a recommender and a memoranda-writer.

He has hinted to close friends in recent days, while the subterranean struggle for authority was going on, that he would get out of the Government altogether if that happened. He adds that he would take such a step with great reluctance because of his deep loyalty to Truman.

SYMINGTON has a dynamic temperament, and he would not fit well into the role of memoranda-writer. One line of attack directed against him has seemed to me particularly unfair. He is reported to have been too friendly toward labor. This report has been circulated by some of the businessmen who attended a recent conference of executives, called by Symington to plan for wartime production. Symington had held a similar conference earlier with trade union officials.

There are several reasons that seem sound why over-all authority should not go to Sawyer. The Department of Commerce is traditionally and properly the friend and abettor of business. If Sawyer were to be given power over all segments of the economy, he would likely find it hard to crack down on his one-time friends. That is almost more than should be asked of human nature.

Furthermore, Sawyer has never shown, as an individual, the traits that such a tough assignment will take. There is bound to be resistance from industry in one way or another. And it requires a stern but just administrator to see that the cuts are made deep enough to insure sufficient defense production while at the same time the hardships are dispensed on a fair and equal basis.

This is where we stand here at home two months after the Korean attack revealed, as in lightning flash, the dangerously exposed position of the Western world. It is, in that classic phrase, a hell of a way to run a railroad.

Boyle Warns GOP on Making Political Issue of Korean War

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

William M. (Bill) Boyle, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said yesterday that the Republicans would hurt themselves at the polls if they try to make a "political football" of the Korean war.

Boyle talked to reporters in the White House lobby after a conference with President Truman on campaign strategy.

He was reminded that the Republicans expect to make big gains in the November election as a result of the war in Korea, and was asked to comment.

"If the Republicans try to use the Korean war as a political football," he said, "it will redound against them."

Boyle said he thought the American people were 100 percent behind President Truman in the Korean conflict, Republicans as well as Democrats. As far as the Democratic National Committee was concerned, he said, it did not intend to allow the Korean matter to become a political issue.

"Personally," he said, "I'm not going to discuss foreign policy. I'm going to follow the President."

Boyle made it clear that he was not accusing the Republicans of making Korea an issue. He said that he was simply pointing out, in response to a question, that his experience had convinced him that whenever politicians tried to make "political hay" of anything like the Korean war, the voters caught on to their dishonest purpose and rose up against them.

Boyle was accompanied to the White House by Sidney Salomon, jr., St. Louis insurance executive, who recently was named treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

Boyle said that they talked to Mr. Truman about plans for helping Democrats in contests in various parts of the country.

He predicted that the Democrats would pick up seats in the Senate, but was silent about the House.

16,000 Cut From Postoffice Rolls in Income Balancing

By The Associated Press

The Post Office Department, attempting to balance its income and outgo, disclosed yesterday that it has cut 16,000 persons off the payroll during the past year.

[Postoffice officials in Washington yesterday said they have not dismissed any employes except 81 temporary workers who were separated from postal service following the April cutdown order.]

The major reductions were made in the wake of the mid-April order for far-reaching cutbacks in postal service. These involved such things as shorter postoffice window hours, less night handling for non-first-class mail and reductions of deliveries in residential areas to one a day.

Postmaster General Donaldson said the service changes were essential to end continuing annual deficits in the postal service. The House last week passed a bill to require the Department to put the service back on its former basis.

Should the Senate concur in this action, without an accompanying larger regular appropriation for the Department, it is certain that Donaldson will strongly recommend a Presidential veto. He has repeatedly said the service changes were in line with Congressional recommendations for economy, indicating the Department will not back-track on the cuts unless Congress decides to allot it more operating funds.

Without saying whether he would veto it, President Truman has said he does not like the House bill.

The Department showed a total payroll as of June 30, 1950, of 501,679, compared with 517,690 on the same date in 1949.

The Department had hoped to save about seventy million dollars a year on the reductions, ordered in April to start without delay and become fully effective by June 30.

The seventy million dollars saving goal, the Department says, resulted from the fact that the postal service was being operated as of April at a cost of $2,277,000,000 a year and the House decided on an appropriation of $2,207,500,000 for the new fiscal year starting July 1—a difference of $69,500,000.

The President's Calling List

President Truman yesterday had the following White House appointments:

11 a. m.—Representative Burke (D., Ohio).

11:30—FDIC Chairman Maple Harl.

12 noon—W. Walton Butterworth, Ambassador to Sweden.

12:30—NSRB Chairman Symington.

1:00—Lunch.

3:30 — Democratic Chairman Boyle.

4:00—Secretary of Agriculture Brannan.

Humphrey Charges Tax Bill Is Now 'Smoke Screen' for Rich

By The Associated Press

Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.) charged yesterday the Senate Finance Committee has converted President Truman's 5 billion dollar tax-boosting bill into a "pork-barrell" and "smoke screen" for the relief of wealthy taxpayers.

The Senate opens its tax debate today and a battle is assured on:

1. A series of rapid-fire amendments Humphrey said and needed to "clean-up" the "pork-barrel committee tax bill."

2. A demand by Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) for a quick showdown on his proposal for a $3,500,000,000 excess profits levy, dating back to last July 1. O'Mahoney wants this super tax pinned to the 5 billion dollar tax bill.

Humphrey issued a formal statement saying the committee-approved tax bill adds or keeps tax law loopholes through which the Treasury would lose more than 500 million dollars a year. He said the bill opens more loopholes than it closes, and declared:

"Although the bill includes the President's basic recommendations for an interim tax program, a number of committee decisions would favor those who either have been enjoying special privileges in the past, or who want to have an easier time avoiding their fair share of Federal taxes in the future."

This was the first direct assault on a bill approved unanimously by Republicans and Democrats on the Finance Committee.

Humphrey said a dozen or more amendments are needed to take out the pork—favored treatment—for upper-bracket taxpayers. Particularly, he urged a 10 per cent withholding tax on corporation dividends. This would create no new obligation to pay taxes but might yield around 170 million dollars annually from persons who now fail to include dividend payments in their income tax statements. The House has approved this withholding, but the Senate Finance Committee cut it out.

Humphrey said, too, that the bill does nothing about "the excess depletion allowances" for oil and gas and other minerals "which the President described as the worst loophole in our tax law."

The tax bill increases individual income taxes close to three billion dollars, about 20 percent for millions of taxpayers; takes another $1,500,000,000 from corporations, and gathers other millions by plugging some loopholes and making other changes.

D. C. Exchange To Lose Hume As Treasurer

By S. Oliver Goodman

Charles Hume will resign as treasurer and a governor of the Washington Stock Exchange, it was anticipated last night.

Chas. Hume

Hume has left the brokerage firm of Thomas L. Hume Sons, Inc., and the local exchange seat in his name has been transferred to his brother, Thomas L. Hume, jr., head of the Hume firm. Rules of the exchange require officers to own seats.

Charles Hume is now associated with the Washington investment banking house of Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath as a registered representative. He has been actively engaged in Washington financial circles for 20 years. Previously, he was with Blythe & Co., New York, for four years and with the First National Bank, Chicago, for six years.

Meanwhile, the Hume firm announced that James P. Hume, Chicago attorney, has been elected as treasurer and to the board of directors. James is another brother of Charles.

Offices of the Auchincloss firm, member of the New York Stock Exchange, are at 719 15th st. nw. The Hume firm is located at 917 15th st. nw.

NEW EXECUTIVE: Henry J. Behny has joined Woodward & Lothrop, Washington department store, as manager of the merchandise control department. He will report directly to Donald Buckingham, vice president in charge of merchandise. A native of Chicago, Behny graduated from Fordham Preparatory School and New York University. He recently was a consultant in a management consulting firm in Chicago. Previously he was associated with the Interstate Department Stores, New York, with the H. L. Green Co., also of New York, and with Goldblatt Bros., Chicago.

Behny

LIBERAL LEAVES: The Shell Oil Co. employes going on military leave are being given liberal benefits. D. R. Myers, district manager, said yesterday the benefits include a lump sum payment equal to two months pay; an allowance between his Government base pay and his normal company pay; reimbursement for premiums for National Life Insurance and job security. Also, the company continues laying away one-half of its normal contributions to the employes' account in the Provident Fund, Shell's retirement program.

VARIETY: National Cash Register announced pay raises for employes and a 5-to-9 percent advance in price of its machines . . . Otis Elevator Co. has decided to redeem October 1 all its $62.50 par preferred stock at $107 a share . . . Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food index climbed 3 cents to $6.56 this week, 11.9 percent above the year ago figure . . . Lumber output in the second quarter was the highest on record . . . Scare buying has passed its peak but demand is still strong for electrical appliances, Business Week says currently.

EXPANSION: Formation of the Washington advertising firm of Onslow and Brown was announced yesterday. The new firm represents an expansion of Walton Onslow and Associates, public relations, at 1028 Connecticut ave. Partners in the new operation are Walton Onslow and Earle P. Brown, both executives of the older firm. They explained that Onslow and Brown will specialize in advertising and local and regional public relations accounts. Walton Onslow and Associates will devote its principal attention to national public relations accounts.

ODD LOTS: Everett J. Boothby, president of the Washington Gas Light Co., has been appointed a member of the new National Defense Committee of the American Gas Association . . . DuPont will add 100,000 square feet to its Martinsville, Va., nylon plant . . . U. S. Steel Corp. said yesterday it would refuse to make further sales to any purchaser who resells its steel in the gray market . . . Schenley Industries, Inc. stockholders approved increase of 25 percent in number of outstanding common shares . . . Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. yesterday filed plans with SEC to issue 25 million dollars of first mortgage bonds to be sold at competitive bidding .

MORE PLANES: Trans World Airline has ordered 10 more twin-engine Martin 4-0-4s from the Glenn L. Martin Co., for delivery in 1951. Last March, TWA placed its first order for 30 Martin 4-0-4s and yesterday's order will bring TWA's total purchase to date to 40. The Martins will be used on TWA's medium and short-haul routes replacing slower equipment.

EARNINGS: Chesapeake & Ohio Railway reported net income of $16,443,000 or $2.05 a share for the seven months ended July 31, compared with $15,452,000 or $1.92 a share in the same 1949 period. Other earnings reports:

Brooklyn Democrat Primary Casualty

By The Associated Press

Representative Joseph L. Pfeifer, eight-term Brooklyn Democrat, was the lone incumbent casualty in Tuesday's primaries in three States, returns showed yesterday.

All others facing contests came through in New York and Mississippi, and Representative Frank A. Barrett (R., Wyo.), the State's only Congressman, won his party's nomination for governor.

A Delaware State convention picked Henry Winchester of Brandywine Hill as the Democratic nominee for the House to run against Republican Representative J. Caleb Boggs.

Beaten By Anfuso

In New York, Representative Pfeifer lost to Victor L. Anfuso, 45-year-old attorney and a native of Sicily.

Pfeifer was the first northern Representative to be eliminated in candidate selections in 35 States.

Earlier, two Republicans from Tennessee and two Democrats from South Carolina were primary victims.

An Idaho canvassing board met to decide officially whether Democratic Senator Glen H. Taylor was defeated in the August 8 primary. The Secretary of State's office reported county canvasses, some still subject to check, showed Taylor lost to former Senator D. Worth Clark by 910 votes out of a total of more than 52,000.

Four House members, the only others challenged in New York's 45-member delegation Tuesday, came through.

They were Representatives Edwin A. Hall in the Thirty-seventh, W. Sterling Cole in the Thirty-ninth, and Clarence E. Kilburn in the Thirty-fourth Districts, veteran upstate Republicans, and Representative Louis B. Heller, Brooklyn Democrat.

Hall skimmed through by a margin of 254 votes over Lester R. Mosher, his nearest rival in a four-way fight.

Thirty-seven New York incumbents were unopposed and three others did not run—Representatives Wadsworth, Le Fevre and William L. Pfeiffer, all Republicans.

In Mississippi, Representative Arthur Winstead, member of the House Armed Services Committee, was renominated over four opponents in the Democratic primary in the Fifth District, despite an attack on his vote against economic aid to Korea.

Representative John Bell Williams, the only other Mississippian challenged won easily over Davage Smith, a political novice, in the Seventh. Nominations in this state are equivalent to election. A run-off September 12 will be necessary in the Third District to decide a successor to retiring Representative Will M. Whittington. The two leaders in a three-way race were State Senators Frank Smith and Oscar Wolfe.

In Wyoming, Representative Barrett won the GOP gubernatorial nomination easily over three opponents. John J. McIntyre, former congressman, apparently won the Democratic nomination.

For Barrett's House seat, Democrats nominated John B. Clark, Cheyenne attorney and party state chairman. He is the son of John D. Clark member of President Truman's Economic Advisory Council. State Representative William Henry Harrison still led two rivals for the Republican nomination.

Looks Bad for Christmas

Paterson, N. J., Aug. 23 (AP).—A $280 check drawn on the Broadway Bank and Trust Co. was deposited in another bank and today reached the First Bank. Clerks there stamped it "no account." The check was signed "Santa Claus."

Home Town Is Mighty Proud

MISS PENNSYLVANIA—Phoenixville, Pa., is proud of Emillie Longacre, a popular young lady who won the honor of representing Pennsylvania in the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City in September. Emilie, a 5-foot 4½-inch blonde, hopes to win a scholarship that will lead to a theatrical career

Crazed Waiter Rams Drill Press Bit Through Son, 4

Ridgefield, Conn., Aug. 23 (AP).—State police reported a hotel waiter placed his young son on a drill press today and rammed a 3/16th-inch bit through his body at least twice.

They identified the father as Joseph Korczynski, 36, employed at The Inn.

The child, Joseph, jr., 4½, was taken to Danbury Hospital in critical condition.

First A-Bomb Proof Motel Setup in Georgia

Toccoa, Ga., Aug. 23 (U.P.).—The first unit of what a company claims to be the Nation's first atom-bomb proof tourist motel was completed today on a scenic highway near here.

First the company "moved" a mountain, then it swung the prefabricated concrete unit into position where the mountain had been. The company says it is going to put the mountain back on the motel to make it atom-bomb proof after 12 units are installed.

How To Hold FALSE TEETH More Firmly in Place

Do your false teeth annoy and embarrass by slipping, dropping or wobbling when you eat, laugh or talk? Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH on your plates. This alkaline (non-acid) powder holds false teeth more firmly and more comfortably. No gummy, gooey, pasty taste or feeling. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH today at any drug store.

22,000 Leave Jobs In 8 Harvester Plants

Chicago, Aug. 23 (AP).—The bulk of 22,000 CIO United Auto Workers in eight International Harvester Company plants went on strike today.

Their contract expired at midnight. They are negotiating with the company for a 15 cents hourly wage boost and other benefits.

The unionists walked out at plants in Louisville, Ky., Evansville, Ind., Springville, Ohio, Memphis, Tenn., and Melrose Park, Ill. Those in three other plants, at Indianapolis and Fort Wayne, Ind., and at the Chicago McCormick Works, were expected to go out later.

Grievance procedure and vacation pay, as well as wages, are among the issues.

The Farm Equipment - United Electrical Workers (Ind.) union went back to work yesterday with a new two year contract providing a general wage increase of seven cents an hour for 27,000 of its members. They work in 11 Harvester plants in Auburn, N. Y., Canton, East St. Louis, Rock Island, Rock Falls and Chicago, and at Richmond, Ind., and Louisville, Ky.

Wildcat Strikes Keep 10,300 Idle at Chrysler

Detroit, Aug. 23 (U.P.).—Wildcat strikes at two Chrysler Corp. plants kept 10,300 workers idle today and 8000 Packard employes waited for the signal ending their nine-day-old walkout.

Workers at Chrysler's Main De Soto plant voted not to return to work. The strike of 2800 there idled 6800 more at two other company plants.

Another dispute at Chrysler's new De Soto plant kept another 700 from their jobs in a dispute over pay for assembly workers.

3700 Refuse to Cross Oil Plant Picket Line

Roxana, Ill., Aug. 23 (U.P.).—Picket lines set up by AFL Pipefitters and Asbestos Workers Unions today closed the Shell Oil Co.'s refinery here, idling 3700 employes.

The picket lines were set by the unions which called a strike yesterday over a dispute involving wages and working conditions. They are demanding pay increases of 22½ cents an hour.

Navy Secretary Urges 'Aggression for Peace'

Omaha, Aug. 23 (AP).—Secretary of Navy Matthews today sounded a call of "agression for peace"—including the use of armed forces if necessary.

"I would not limit the means we would use to get peace," he said in an impromptu address before the Rotary Club.

Nation-Wide Railroad Strike Called for Monday Morning

the President that we have authorized train and yardmen withdrawn from service on all railroads in the United States 6 a. m. standard time, Monday, August 28, as a result of failure to reach settlement on the national rules movement."

The unions call their wage-hour dispute a "national rules movement" because it involves changes in the operating rules for railroad employes.

The unions are demanding a 40-hour week with no loss in take-home pay from their present 48-hour wages, plus other adjustments in working conditions.

The two unions—the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors—have a membership of some 300,000 workers. A total of 131 railroads would be involved in the strike.

Twice during the current White House negotiations and once earlier in the year the unions urged President Truman to take over the railroads to avert a stoppage in the Nation's rail transport system.

However, Mr. Truman rejected the appeals and, as late as Monday, directed Steelman, the Administration's top trouble-shooter in labor disputes, to "keep on trying" for a settlement.

White House officials had talked optimistically of no strike when the second round of the day's talks broke up late yesterday afternoon.

Presidential Secretary Charles Ross told newsmen that Steelman had been advised there would be no further five-day "token" strikes such as the unions called earlier this week against three rail terminals and two steel-hauling short line railroads in the Chicago-Pittsburgh area.

The unions themselves had voluntarily pledged a moratorium "for the time being" on further strikes, and later explained they did so "out of respect for the President" and to "create a favorable atmosphere" for settlement.

But in announcing the moratorium, they would not say how long it would last.

President Truman seized the railroads and turned them over to the Army to operate in June, 1948, when the last Nation-wide rail strike threatened.

At that time, Mr. Truman got a court injunction after the unions said that seizure would not prevent the strike.

In the present controversy, however, the unions have repeatedly expressed a willingness to work for the Government—even at the same pay and hours they are getting now—if the Administration would take over the railroads.

Union officials have said that, unless terms satisfactory to the men could be obtained from railroad management, the only way to "keep the men in line" and prevent a wave of wildcat strikes was for the Government to take over.

In another instance of seizure, Mr. Truman took over the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad last June and obtained a court injunction on the ground that the line was needed to move vital defense materials needed in the Korean War.

The railroads have offered a 23-cents-an-hour wage boost for yard service workers, coupled with an agreement to raise or lower wages as living costs rose or fell in the next three years.

A similar plan, hooked to the Federal cost-of-living index, is in operation in the contract between General Motors and the CIO United Auto Workers.

The unions promptly rejected this offer by management, made last Saturday night, and continued to press for the same pay for 40 hours as they have been getting for 48. This would amount to an increase of 31 cents an hour.

Railroad officials said the unions' full demand, if met, would cost the Nation's carriers about 60 million dollars a year.

They said a typical yard brakeman—the largest class among the 70,000 workers in yard service—now receives $12.26 a day.

They said that if the unions had accepted the railroads' offer, the yard brakeman's basic daily rate would have been increased to $14.10. The unions are asking $14.74.

In view of the Korean War crisis, labor experts said it was virtually inevitable that the Nation-wide strike call would force some Government action.

It was expected to come quickly, since even a short strike would cripple the movement of weapons, munitions and supplies vitally needed by American and Allied forces in the Korean War.

Morse Urges Senate Inquiry Into NLRB

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) yesterday told printers assembled here that he favors a Senate investigation of the National Labor Relations Board policies.

More specifically, he told some 400 delegates attending the annual convention of the International Typographical Union, he would like the Senate to hold public hearings on the enforcement policies of the NLRB and its general counsel, Robert M. Denham, in relation to the Taft-Hartley labor law.

"We ought to find out why Denham and the board refuse to discuss with the ITU the question of voluntary compliance, when at the same time the board works out with employers settlements short of the court decree stage—even in the case of employers who in the past have been found guilty of repeated violations of the law."

The Senator said he had reliable information that the NLRB, "after some sort of a one-sided inquiry," was going to court against the printers without giving them a chance to comply with its order, even though ITU officers offered to comply voluntarily. He referred to the NLRB's cease-and-desist order on a series of unfair labor practices brought against the ITU by the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

"This sort of procedure seems to me a bit high-handed," said Senator Morse, adding that "the labor-management subcommittee of the Senate is looking into this matter."

"We've heard a lot about the mutuality of the Taft-Hartley law," he declared. "I think it would be a good thing to check on whether there is mutuality in the enforcement of orders issued under it."

His statements brought cheers from the delegates whose union of some 90,000 members has bitterly fought Taft-Hartley law provisions since its adoption in 1947.

Senator Morse, in his talk yesterday also attacked the Senate's economics control legislation (of wartime powers for the President) as "so honeycombed with appeasement" it makes him "sick to the stomach." He did not, however, point out which provisions he regarded as "appeasement."

The Senator's talk came during a business session of ITU delegates, highlighted by a successful fight by the delegates favoring substantial pay raises for union officials. The delegates successfully pressed the pay-raise fight despite their own laws committee's recommendation to disapprove all pay-raise bills, one of which would have doubled the officials' present salaries.

The bill approved yesterday, subject to final approval by the union membership, raises the union president's pay from $10,000 a year to $250 a week ($13,000). It similarly raises the pay of the union's secretary-treasurer, and provides a weekly salary of $200, instead of $7500 annually, for two vice presidents.

Delegates who urged the pay raises protested that the union's consistent refusaals to pay the officials more "is thrown in our faces every time we try to get pay raises for the printers and mailers."

"The publishers say," protested one New York delegate, "if you believe so much in raising salaries, why don't you raise those of your own officers."

Other delegates pointed out that the foremen of printing and mailing sections are getting more money than ITU officials.

Contract Let For Landover School Unit

Contract for the construction of an eight classroom addition to the Landover Hills Elementary School was awarded last night by the Prince Georges County Board of Education.

The board, at a special meeting in Upper Marlboro, awarded the contract to the low bidder, Blake Construction Co. of Washington, who bid $142,438.

The school was built in September, 1948, with ten classrooms, auditorium-gymnasium, and other rooms. It now is nearly filled to twice the rated capacity.

Bids on the four room addition to the Columbia Park Elementary School were opened but the low bid, of $166,837, offered by Avery Construction Co., was higher than the appropriation so action was withheld. Plans will be altered to fit the money available.

Military Traffic Service Unification Announced

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson yesterday announced creation of a unified "military traffic service" to manage movement of passengers and cargo of all the armed forces in the United States.

E. G. Plowman, vice president in charge of traffic for the United States Steel Corporation, Pittsburgh, was appointed director. He served during World War II as a transportation official of the War Production Board.

Virginia Polio Load Shows Sharp Decline

Richmond, Va., Aug. 23 (AP).—Virginia Health Department officials took a less grim view of the State's polio situation today as the weekly report showed a drop of nearly one-third in the number of new cases.

Sixty-eight cases were listed for the week ending yesterday, compared to 94 for the previous week. But 13 new coses were reported today to increase the Virginia total this year to 494, highest in the State's history.

Happy Is The Day When Backache Goes Away . . . .

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

One on the Aisle—

Goldwyn's Annual Has a High Gloss

By Richard L. Coe

SLICK AND SUPERFICIAL, "Our Very Own," at Keith's, is Samuel Goldwyn's annual tear-jerker.

Much is made in a Goldwyn picture of what is easiest described as polished realism. This time he—and his author, F. Hugh Herbert—seem to be striving for that sense of contemporary America which was captured so effectively in "The Best Years of Our Lives."

Now, there is no doubt that much of it will strike all of you as immensely lovable and lifelike. It's possible to remember just such homey incidents as Herbert and the cameras present from one's own life—the arrival of a television set; the relationships of daughters ranging from 9 to 18; the plight of the baffled, agreeable father; the sight of a comfortable school campus; the parade of automobiles scattering scholars homeward, and the graduation exercises which are so much a part of an American June.

But there are two serious disturbances in "Our Very Own." This beautiful home, presided over by Jane Wyatt and Donald Cook, puts them in the very rare $25,000-a-year class. You will envy their breakfast china, the cook who evidently "lives in" and the long, handy telephone wire for which the phone company will charge you plenty extra. It is, then, an idealized reality we watch in "Our Very Own," which may very well be exactly what Goldwyn intended, but which certainly puts its characters in the dream category.

More serious is the story, so conveniently developed to drip tears from the patrons, but still activated only by persons of monstrous selfishness and juvenile attitudes. While this will seem to many, including Mr. Goldwyn, a pleasing reflection of American life, it also reveals a staggeringly un-adult and materialistic society which can be immensely depressing to ponder. I'm not sure one can be proud of it. One can explain it, but hardly boast of it.

The story concerns the couple's eldest daughter, who was adopted when they thought they'd have no children of their own. As so often happens (again, the realistic coating), two daughters of their own did arrive and, somehow, they put off telling their children about the adoption.

Polished Coating

This is revealed by the middle sister, a conveniently selfish monster, who's trying to take her elder sister's boy friend for her own and stumbles on the truth in her mother's desk. The eldest daughter searches out her real mother, finds her a floozy from the wrong side of the tracks, goes through some hours of torture, then sees that the love and affection of her adoption can mean more than she ever dreamed. It makes the point for her graduation class speech, the one sincerely moving moment in the picture.

With the outer coating of "contemporary importance" bleatings removed, then, this is the old, reliable story of mother love. I have no quarrel with it as such, but the essential story and the coating of realism should be recognized for what it is.

The performances, needless to say, are as polished as the cameras' lenses, though Ann Blyth, it seems to me, does get to the heart of the troubled adopted girl. Farley Granger is his likable self, but all the way through one is perfectly conscious that this is a movie, a very slick, pretentious movie, and certainly not a slice of life that will move the perceptive.

MOON AND MARS seems to be the latest trend scheme . . . With "Destination Moon" established for the inevitable "breaking all records since our opening in March, 1937, V. Iorio, Trans-Lux Theater," and "Rocketship XM" touring the nabes, the Little promises a double bill on the same theme starting tomorrow . . . This will be "Rocket Ship" and "Mars Attacks the World," with "Henry V" in its finale today . . . How do you—and Mr. Iorio—account for the fact that everything always seems to be breaking records, down through the years? . . . And yet, business is always "fair."

"OUR VERY OWN." RKO-Radio release produced by Samuel Goldwyn. Screen play by F. Hugh Herbert. Photographed by Lee Garmes. Music by Victor Young. Directed by David Miller. At Keith's.

THE NEW GEORGE WASHINGTON

L'Enfant to Play Washington In Sesqui Symphonic Drama

The Sesquicentennial drama, "Faith of Our Fathers," will have a new George Washington in the star role beginning September 1.

He is Lawrence Ryle who has been playing the roles of Gov. George Clinton and Pierre L'Enfant. He replaces Charles F. McClelland who is leaving to take over a part in the Ellery Queen television program.

The new George is 6 feet 3½ inches to the original George's 6 feet 5 and quite a few pounds lighter. Like McClelland, Ryle needs the aid of a stage addition to his nose to give it the Roman touch of the original.

Ryle has actually played the star part four times this month as an understudy.

The symphonic drama itself has been undergoing considerable change since it opened August 4. About 15 minutes has been cut out of the 2¼-hour performance by rearranging some sequences and omitting others.

For the past two weeks author Paul Green has been busy rewriting Washington's lines. McClelland is using the original script by Ryle will use the new version.

Ryle explained yesterday that the new version makes Washington "not just a figure passing through the scenes but a man with a soul." He said he hopes his interpretation will make the first president "much more of a human being."

A 34-year-old Philadelphian, Ryle made his professional debut at the Provincetown Playhouse. He was a Navy intelligence officer during the war; then went to Broadway to play in Elizabeth Bergner's "Dutchess of Malfi" and in Eddie Dowlan's "Our Lan'." He also has appeared in the strawhat circuit and on radio and television.

Lauren Bacall Says Man Caller Was Lewd

Hollywood, Aug. 23 (U.P.)—A man accused of making indecent proposals to Screen Star Lauren Bacall was arrested today at her Benedict Canyon home. Henry P. Zaharias, 37, of Salt Lake City, was accused by Miss Bacall of entering her home and making lewd advances. Miss Bacall had her secretary call police while she talked to the man.

A Novelty for the Olney

Ives Rescues 'September Song' But Chorus Dampens 'Holiday'

THE OLNEY Theater this week is presenting what for it is a novelty—a musical, "Knickerbocker Holiday."

While Burl Ives is ingratiating as Nieuw Amsterdam's Governor Stuyvesant, the production, I regret to say, smacks muchly of a junior class annual with proud relatives out front plumping for the kids.

This is as inevitable as it is unfortunate, because a musical comedy chorus is fundamentally absurd and only by the most kindly freaks of Fortune (such as in "Kiss Me, Kate") can a chorus be anything but silly. Since the summer theater can hardly be expected to supply the luscious lassies and the efficient garcons required, too much of one's time at Olney this week is spent facing what are, I'm sure, splendid individuals but which is nonetheless, a collection of gawks.

With book and lyrics by Maxwell Anderson and music by Kurt Weill, "Knickerbocker Holiday" is one of the glorious misfits of American musical comedy. To those who saw Walter Huston in the principal role singing "September," it is one of the treasures of memory and we have all longed for a repeat. It was a big hit in its initial week at the National, but its subsequent New York career was never what we all hoped it would be.

How to Tell an American

The story is of Dutch New York and the discovery by a young man that he was the original American: "It isn't that he's black or white. It isn't that he works with tools. It's only that it takes away his appetite to live by a book of rules."

The Anderson lyrics are sharp and literate, though one catches but few of them from the chorus. Although the author has described it as a musical comedy, it is more a play with music; his cast is small, but the need for polished performances is greater.

Apart from the popular Ives, who sings his numbers with charm, the voices at Olney are such only by definition, the pianos thump too heatedly over the rhythms and the chorus is totally unable to cope with the patter.

Reliable Becher Scores

Ives does good service by singing of how long a while it is from May to December with the tender charm totally lacking in the recent revival of the song. He obliterates from your shattered memory, for instance, the young ladies who clutch microphones singing words which, seriously addressed by a lady to a younger man, should shock us out of our boots.

The best of Ives' associates is Morley Meredith as Washington Irving, the teller of the tale, created by Ray Middleton, now the "South Pacific" planter. Meredith does well. John C. Becker is good, too, as a councillor.

While watching Ward Donovan's hero, I was insistently reminded of Jean Arthur playing "Peter Pan," and it seemed to me almost any New York chorus audition could offer a better soprano than Bettina Thayer.

But it was, finally, the earnest, sophomoric chorus which made me relish the more my memory of the equally small, but superbly drilled "Knickerbocker Holiday" the Playwrights' Company offered as its second production just after it had gotten under way with "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." Which is rather sad, since at that point some of Olney's choristers could hardly have been out of their swaddling clothes. R. L. C.

Government Drops Curtis Wright Suit

Cincinnati, Aug. 23 (AP).—Assistant United States Attorney Frank J. Richter today filed an agreement to dismissal of the suit brought by the Government in 1943 against the Wright Aeronautical Corp., and the Curtiss-Wright Corp., for 12 million dollars damages.

The suit had charged the companies with delivering faulty airplane engines to the War Department during World War II. The suit originally was dismissed by District Judge John H. Druffel but the Government then appealed the case.

Post Story Telling of New Drug for Ulcers Credited With Saving Most of Man's Stomach

A medical news story in The Washington Post was credited yesterday with saving "two thirds" of the stomach of Dr. Karl de Schweinitz, author and social worker.

De Schweinitz, himself, disclosed the "episode," in a letter of thanks to N. S. Haseltine, medicine and science reporter of The Post.

The news article, published on July 9, told of clinical success at Duke University Hospital, Durham, N. C., with a new drug, banthine, for relief of stomach ulcers. It described how oral use of the drug was saving patients from surgery.

Describing his own experience, Dr. de Schweinitz said that early in July, without advance warning of pain, he collapsed with a hemorrhaging ulcer. Taken to Garfield, he was X-rayed and an operation was scheduled.

"The resection of my stomach would have reduced my gastric area by about two thirds," he declared. "Fortunately for me," he added, "I was too weak for immediate surgery."

The stomach operation was scheduled 10 days later, and the patient was returned to his home, at 2505 P st. nw., to build himself up for surgery. Dr. de Schweinitz later told friends the doctors told him not to worry, that he'd still have a third of his stomach, and could still eat—some 17 meals a day, mostly liquid, instead of the usual three square.

"Eight days before the operation was to take place," he wrote, "I read your story in the Sunday Post. We were so much impressed with it that Mrs. de Schweinitz mentioned it to the doctor when he telephoned for a report on my condition."

De Schweinitz told how the doctor, who had not yet received his copy of the medical journal, contacted a colleague who had, and consulted with associates in Group Health Association. They decided to try the drug.

De Schweinitz wrote, "my stomach is still intact and the ulcer from which I was suffering has substantially healed."

Dr. de Schweinitz 62, is perhaps best known nationally as the author of "Growing Up," the so-called birds, bees and flowers book for sex education of 12-year-olds. He has written two other books and is writing a third, all on social security problems, since he moved to Washington in 1944.

Since 1944, he has been director of the committee on education and social security of the American Council of Education.

Panel Recommends A-Plant Pay Raise

Oak Ridge, Tenn., Aug. 23 (AP).—The Atomic Energy labor relations panel has recommended a pay raise and other benefits equalling a 12½-cent hourly wage increase at two atomic plants, informed sources said today. Some 2800 atomic production workers would be affected.

An AFL group and a CIO union voted behind closed doors tonight on whether to accept the recommendations and end two wage disputes which have been hanging fire nearly three months.

Senate Brands Rosselini Fascist And Libertine

The Senate yesterday branded Italian film director Roberto Rosselini, husband of actress Ingrid Bergman, a Fascist libertine and warned Hollywood it objects to movies made by Communists, Nazis and Fascists.

It passed unanimously a resolution sponsored by Johnson (D., Colo.), expressing the "sense of the Senate" that films directed or produced by totalitarian-minded moviemen should be banned from interstate commerce.

The resolution has no legal force but, if ignored, might lead to attempts to ban them by law.

A report was read from Johnson's Interstate Commerce Committee which singled out Rosselini for scathing attack as a Fascist.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE BAFFLING CASE of Luke Easter is now plaguing the Cleveland Indians in what was supposed to be their pennant rush. The giant colored first baseman, biggest man in the majors, was supposed to give the Indians that valuable long ball, but it has been a long time no sinew.

At a time when the Indians are getting the league's best pitching, Easter's hitting has bogged down to a fading whisper, particularly in the extra-base hit department which his 6 feet 4 inches and 230 pounds personify. Incredibly, the big fellow has made only two hits for extra bases since July 29.

Povich

He still maintains a .272 average, and the Indians are still keeping him in the clean-up hitting job, but their faith in Easter has naturally oozed somewhat. He handles his bat with toothpick-ease and is still a frightening spectacle to pitchers. But they've been getting him out.

Easter himself doesn't know what to make of it. A couple of months back he was whaling home runs all over the league, and a couple of them were for record distances. Right now he's taking refuge in the old plaint "I ain't meeting the ball."

EVEN SO, you could hardly call the big guy a flop. He has already hit 22 home runs, more than 90 percent of the players in the league will smite all season. Around first base, if he is no gazelle, he can at least be described as un-clumsy, and is giving the Indians a good job in that department. Easter's tough luck is that they had him pegged for tremendous hitting feats.

Hank Greenberg was so solid on him he traded off Mickey Vernon to the Nats for Dick Weik. Bucky Harris, who had Easter in the Coast League where he batted .363 and hit 25 homers in 80 games, predicted the fellow "might be the best hitter in the American League." There never was any question of his power. He put home runs into a couple of A. L. spots that no other hitter ever reached.

There is some evidence that Easter is the most over-coached hitter in the league. Greenberg has been tutoring him personally, Lou Boudreau has been prodding him constantly to try to pull the ball to right field. Ted Williams got him aside and coached him to put more wrist, less sweep into his swing. Luke yesses all of them and tries everything.

HIS CLEVELAND teammates are rooting hard for the hefty fellow. They're convinced he'll shake his slump and resume his murderous slugging that helped them so much in the early weeks. "The pitchers haven't found any weakness of Luke's," one of them was saying yesterday. "He doesn't have a weakness. He's just all at sea."

Cleveland Coach Al Simmons is heartily in favor of leaving Easter alone. Simmons well remembers his own troubles when coaches descended on his unorthodox style with hints of how to hit. Simmons told 'em all to go jump in the lake, and proceeded to keep his foot in the bucket and the pitchers scared nigh to death.

Easter himself takes a dim view of the demand that he pull his shots into right field. "I ain't no natural pull-hitter," he said. "I got a lot of power straight away and to right and left center." His slump at bat hasn't affected his play otherwise. He's still sharp around first base, and when he does get on the basepaths he's one of the club's good base runners, curiously fast for an out-size guy.

ON THE ROAD, Easter rooms with Larry Doby, the Indians' other colored player. Doby is one of those still convinced Easter will catch fire and hit more home runs than anyone else in the league. "That will happen next year, I think," said Doby. "No matter what they say about the second year being the toughest for a new man in the league, the first is the hardest. I know all about the hard time I had getting started, Luke's having it now."

Unlike some guys in a hitting slump, Easter isn't sulking. He's still a hoo-rah guy on the Cleveland bench, and there was that day a few weeks back when Al Rosen hit a home run that tied the Tigers, 2-2, in the ninth inning. The whole Cleveland bench whooped it up and prepared to greet Rosen. All except Easter, he wasn't around for the reception.

It seems that Easter had forgotten he was 6 feet 4 inches, and that the concrete roof hit back. He wound up as a great big, unconscious bundle of team spirit and they carried him out feet first. The Indians like his attitude.

Chapman, Turnesa and Coe Upset In Amateur

Minneapolis, Aug. 23 (U.P.).—Upsets swept three former champions from the fiftieth National Amateur golf tournament today.

Defending champion Charlie Coe of Oklahoma City, two-time titlist Willie Turnesa of White Plains, N. Y., and 1940 king Dick Chapman of Pinehurst, N. C., fell out of the running, leaving only Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, among the ranking favorites.

Stranahan, who is out for his first amateur title, will meet slight Willie Barber of Woodland Hills, Calif., in tomorrow's fifth round. Winners of the eight morning matches will advance to the afternoon quarter-finals.

Turnesa, attempting the rare feat of winning the National Amateur a third time, succumbed 1 up to Loren Krugel, 34-year-old Mankato, Minn., grease salesman, in a match finished as darkness settled over the trap-studded Minneapolis golf club course.

Coe, wild with his woods and uncertain with his irons, fell 4 and 3 before Harold Paddock, jr., bespectacled son of an Aurora, Ohio, golf course owner, in this afternoon's fourth round after disposing of Emerson Carey III of Denver 5 and 4 in the morning.

Maxwell Stymies Chapman

Billy Maxwell, 21-year-old Odessa, Tex., belter, managed to get in Chapman's way often enough to beat him 1 up. The tall Texan laid perfect stymies on Chapman three times and they cost the ex-champion the match.

Stranahan, stronger than ever after squeaking past Canadian amateur Champion William Mawhinney of Vancouver, B. C., 1 up, in the morning round, won as expected in the afternoon from Fred Wampler, handsome college titlist from Indianapolis, 4 and 3.

Stranahan, who hopes to add the crown here to the British amateur title he won earlier this year, lost

Tom Ferrick, Berra's 2-Run Homer Help Raschi Win

By Ted Smits

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—The New York Yankees clawed their way back into hot contention in the American League pennant race today, setting down the Detroit Tigers 7-5 and cutting the lead of the league leaders to 1½ games.

Tom Ferrick saved the game for New York. He relieved Vic Raschi in the eighth and quelled a Tiger uprising that scored three runs with two out. Ferrick made Gerry Priddy pop out to end the inning.

A crowd of 50,476 (44,196 paid) saw the Yankees win their sixth straight and their second in a row over the Tigers.

Fred Hutchinson's two-run single in the eighth drove Raschi from the mound just as Raschi's two-run single in the fourth had made his pitching rival, Art Houtteman, walk to the bench in disgust without waiting for Hank Borowy to be called in from the bullpen.

Raschi was credited with his sixteenth victory of the year and was given brilliant help both defensively and at bat. John Mize hit a two run double in fourth, and Yogi Berra's fifteenth homer of the year in the sixth scored Joe DiMaggio. Yogi, hero of yesterday's victory, drove in what proved to be the winning runs.

Scarborough Wins, 1-0; A's Take 2d, 6-5

Philadelphia, Aug. 23 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics broke a 10-game losing streak tonight by taking the second half of a twi-night doubleheader from the Chicago White Sox, 6-5. Ray Scarborough blanked the A's on four hits in the opener, 1-0.

The A's won the second game with a five-run uprising in the fifth on a home run by Joe Tipton, a pair of doubles, a single, two walks and an error by Chico Carrasquel. Eddie Joost also homered for the As.

The Sox got to Hank Wyse, who won his sixth game, in the eighth with four runs, but Bob Hooper halted the uprising. Eddie Robinson homered with two men on in that eighth-inning rally.

Chicago won the opening game on a single, a boot by Billy Hitchcock and a run-producing single by Phil Masi. It was an unearned run and spelled defeat for Lou Brissie, who had won five in a row.

Calls N. J. Charge 'Outrage'

W. E. Miller Suspended In Doping of Trotter

Special Dispatch to The Post

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 23—William E. Miller, 71-year-old president of Rosecroft Raceway and a leading figure in harness racing for more than 40 years, today was suspended by the New Jersey Racing Commission on a charge that one of his trotters was doped.

The news was a bombshell in sulky circles. The millionaire Washington, D. C., furniture dealer has an unblemished harness record as an owner, driver, trainer and breeder. Winner of 105 races in 200-odd starts last year, he was the country's top amateur driver.

State Treasurer Walter T. Margetts, jr., whose department includes the Racing Commission, said Miller and two others also charged will be given hearings next Wednesday.

Margetts said saliva tests on two horses which won recently at Freehold Raceway showed traces of chloral hydrate. One of the horses, Don Pronto, was owned by Charles O. Heckel, jr., Bloomfield, N. J., and driven by Stanley Dancer, New Egypt, N. J. Both men are under suspension.

Miller's Marjorie Mac, 7-year-old trotter he owns and drives, was the other. The New Jersey law, similar to that of Maryland, holds the owner and trainer responsible for the condition of a race horse.

(Reached by phone in Freehold, Miller told The Washington Post, "I don't know what happened. They told me they found traces of a powder that would make a horse stop. Well, we won. In fact, I won six races last Friday.

("The whole thing's an outrage. There's no protection of any kind around the paddock. No fence, or anything. Anybody could walk in and fool with anyone's horses. I don't know how they have a license to operate.

("No, I'm not a bit worried. After all, what can I do about it?")

(Miller said he didn't plan to have a lawyer represent him at next Wednesday's hearing. Here in Washington, his son, John, secretary-treasurer of Rosecroft and manager of the two Miller furniture stores, was amazed at the charge.

(John Miller said, "It's utterly ridiculous. Why, Dad's always been in the game for fun.")

William E. Miller has trained, raced and bred trotters and pacers since he won his first race in 1907 over the old Brightwood track in Washington.

Born in Colonial Beach, Va., March 29, 1879, he came to Washington in 1895 as he often recounts "with a 50-cent piece in my pocket."

Five years later he opened his own furniture store and the business prospered with his two stores now grossing in the neighborhood of two million dollars yearly.

He started in the sulky sport as a hobby but in recent years it's been practically a full-time pursuit and business. At his Rosecroft estate in nearby Oxon Hill, Md., Miller operates the country's third largest harness breeding farm.

Hermanski Homers, Kiner Slams No. 38

Pittsburgh, Aug. 23 (AP).—Brooklyn scored two runs, including a home run by Gene Hermanski in the top of the 17th inning tonight, to nip the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-5 in a marathon contest

Ralph Kiner's thirty-eighth homer of the season in the ninth inning knotted the count at 4-4 and sent the game into extra innings.

Ralph Branca went in for the Bums in the ninth and Bill Werle pitched for Pittsburgh from the tenth until the fifteenth when Mel Queen took over.

The Dodgers led 4-3 going into the ninth. Kiner, first man up, lashed a home run. Branca then relieved Carl Erskine. Wally Westlake singled, Clyde McCullough doubled and Jack Phillips walked to load the bases, but Branca got the next two men out.

In the fourteenth the Dodgers scored on Roy Campanella's single, a sacrifice by Branca and Tom Brown's pinch single.

Lemon, Wynn Face Griffs Here Tonight

With an excellent chance to move up on Detroit and New York, the third place Cleveland Indians will shoot their best—Early Wynn and Bob Lemon—at the Nats this evening in a twilight-night doubleheader at Griffith Stadium.

The Nats and Indians were rained out last night as the Tigers and Yankees continued to hammer at each other in their hand-to-hand fight for first place. Despite their idleness, the Indians picked up a half-game on the Tigers, who lost to New York, 7-5.

Only three games behind Detroit, and a game-and-a-half to the rear of the Yanks, the Indians are hoping to sweep the bill while the two leaders are cutting each other up again in New York.

Wynn, enjoying his greatest season with 14 victories and 5 losses, has won 11 out of his last 12 decisions. Lemon, beaten twice in a row, still has won 18 games, and dropped only 7.

Washington manager Bucky Harris will try to make the road as bumpy as possible for the visitors. Assigned to pitch against Wynn is the Nat's biggest winner, Sid Hudson, and ready to face Lemon is Cuban Sandalio Consuegra, conqueror of the slugging Red Sox in his last Griffith Stadium start.

Hudson, winner of 11 and loser of 10, has drawn Wynn as his opponent three times this year, and they're even up. Hudson beat Early, 5-4, lost to him, 8-2, and had a 3-3 tie in another game when both were dismissed in the ninth inning.

Only Baugh, Taylor to Switch—

Redskins Plan to Abandon Their Two-Platoon System

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Los Angeles, Aug. 23—The Washington Redskins can't afford the luxury of the two-platoon system any longer and as a result there'll be only two lineup changes when the ball changes hands this fall.

Sammy Baugh, who specializes in passing alone, will remain in that capacity and End Bones Taylor, who specializes in catching Baugh's aerials, sticks to that job alone also. When the Redskins lose the ball, they'll also lose that pair's services on defense.

Other members of the 32-man squad Coach Herman Ball trots out will have to be football players, playing offense as well as defense.

Don't get the idea the Redskins are coming up with a host of 60-minute performers. They aren't. The limitations of the 32-man squad force Ball to play the others at both positions.

In past years, there have been many Redskins' defensive players who didn't even know the offensive signals. Result: When an offensive specialist was injured, his replacement, although able-bodied, usually hurt the emergency rather than helped it.

But that's a thing of the past. Every man knows, or at least is supposed to know, the offensive and defensive signals. Those who don't will find themselves off the Redskins' payroll.

You're going to see, for example, Bill Dudley at left halfback when the Redskins have the ball. When they lose it, Dudley doesn't return to the bench. He becomes the safety man.

Quarterback Harry Gilmer, assistant passing specialist, won't get to rest as long either this year. He'll spell Dudley as safety man.

Rob Goode and Pete Stout, who alternate as fullbacks, won't trot off the field when the opposition gains possession. Whichever is in the game will stay—as defensive halfback.

The two major defensive replacements will be Ed Berrang, who can play offense but who doesn't do it often, filling in for Taylor and Hall Haynes, the Santa Clara rookie, relieving Baugh on defense.

Taylor, fragile as he is, is a risk on defense. He's one of the best pass catchers in the league and the coaches don't want to get him hurt. Baugh, of course, is 36. Sam wouldn't mind playing defense, but he's too valuable, as a passer and a box office magnet, to be exposed to hard tackles. And he won't be.

Actually, the elimination of the two-platoon system figures to help the team. Instead of 15 offensive players and 15 defensive players, the Redskins will have 30 football players, or reasonable facsimiles thereof.

Ball wasn't entirely sure he would junk the platoon system until today when he studied for the umpteenth time pictures of the Redskins' conquest of the Rams and later the San Francisco 49ers. Now he's convinced it's the best way.

IN SHORT—one more head rolled today. It belonged to Fullback Oscar Ed Smith, picked up from the New York Yankees at the June pro draft meeting. His departure brings the squad to 41, 9 over par . . . the business office also reduced its roster when the official photographer was released. His camera fouled up. His only shot the first three-quarters of the Rams' game. He got his walking papers shortly after leaving the dark room . . . The Redskins took in the Rams-Chicago Cardinals expihition game tonight at the Coliseum. They play the Cardinals Saturday night in Denver.

Phils Whip Cincy, 6 to 4

Cincinnati, Aug. 23 (AP).—The front-running Philadelphia Phils, with Fireman Jim Konstanty once again coming to the rescue, defeated the Cincinnati Reds today, 6 to 4.

The kids from Philadelphia won the game by hitting Willie Ramsdell at opportune times. Home runs by Del Ennis and Andy Seminick helped the youngsters to win.

Bob Miller won his eleventh game against three defeats, but he was yanked in the ninth with two out and two on base, in favor of Konstanty. After Ted Kluszewski doubled to center, driving in one run, Joe Adcock went out on a fly, ending the game.

Apprentice Russo Wins 4 Races at Bel Air, Two Paying $40

Bill Bennings . . .

DEAR FOLKS: AT BEL AIR Trainer C. E. Brining has been told not to enter any more horses until the stewards investigate the form flip-flop by R. E. Boerner's Saints Rest. This horse, after finishing last and appearing meek as a lamb, led almost all the way to win next out. There was a slight difference in tracks, the strip being fast the first time and slow the next. However, Saints Rest had won three straight before coming here. The four-year-old was a 7-5 favorite in his first outing and a second choice paying $8.40 in his second performance. Looks as If Time is sold and the deal will be completed before the meeting opens next Wednesday. See you on the rail—BILL

Rival Baird Pilots Home Sunny River

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 23—An apprentice jockey made more news than the horses at Bel Air today.

Andy Russo, New York beginner, rode four winners to take the saddle lead with 13 victories in the meet's seven days.

Russo was bucking sizeable odds, two of his winners today paying $40. Andy started off with Karen S. ($7.60) in the third then booted home Light Buckle ($40.60) in the fifth; Winterbury ($7.40) in the seventh, and Loyal ($40.40) in the eighth.

Russo's nearest competitor, Jockey Jimmy Baird, won the featured Darlington Purse with Sunny River to post his eleventh success. Sunny River hadn't been in the money in eight starts since last June.

Baird, in piloting the daughter of Okapi to her fourth victory in 20 starts this year, booted her home two and a half lengths in front of Mrs. Ann O. Reid's Blue Egret. Three lengths farther back came John Foster's Econette to be third in the field of 10.

With Blue Egret the favorite, Sunny River returned a $6 win mutuel. She was clocked in 1:44 1/5 over a track slightly on the dull side and termed "good" by the chart crew. A crowd of 5000 saw the test.

Baird also had a hand in producing a $149.80 pay-off on the 8-2 combination in the daily double. He put the finishing touches on the transaction, winning with E. E. Miles' Cigar, a $6.60 shot

Jean Holland Wins Wrestling Feature

Jean Holland defeated Beverly Lehmer with a body press after 12 minutes in the feature wrestling match before 1700 fans last night at Turner's Arena.

George Macricostas and Kenny Ackles wrestled to a 60-minute draw in the semi-windup. In other bouts, Mike Paidousis and Harry Kruskamp defeated Harry Finklestein and Lou Bertucci in two of three falls and Bud Curtis won from Tiny Mills in 17 minutes with a dropkick and body press.

Colts Tackle Bears Tonight in Baltimore

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Aug. 23.—As strange as it sounds for a football team in August, tomorrow night's engagement here with the Chicago Bears is a must game for the Baltimore Colts.

Reeling under two exhibition defeats, the last a 34-7 mauling at the hands of the Cleveland Browns, the Colts feel they have to win this one—or, at least, make a creditable showing—if they're to have a sizable following through their gruelling National Football League campaign.

The Colts, you know, won only one All-America Conference game last year. They'll be trying to shake the fate at the gate that befalls a chronic loser.

Although their desire will be high in tomorrow night's Variety Club benefit, starting at 8:30 o'clock, chances of the Colts can't be considered too encouraging.

Cleveland romped by, capitalizing on the Colts' weak pass defense. The man who will be exploiting it tomorrow night is none other than Johnny Lujack. The Notre Dame great passed twice to J. R. Boone in the last quarter to carry the Bears to a 34-33 victory over the New York Yankees in their opening test. Last time out, the New York Giants shaded the Bears, 10-7. That's another reason the Colts will have to be wary.

In their only appearance in this locality this season, the Bears bring a squad, including 24 holdovers from last year's team that won nine of 12 league tests. Outstanding rookies include Fullback Fred Morrison, Ohio State; Halfback Chuck Hunsinger, No. 1 draft choice from Florida, and End John (Red) O'Quinn, Wake Forest's standout pass receiver.

The usual mild-mannered Clem Crowe has been ripping into his Colt charges at their Western Maryland training camp. He called their play against Cleveland the worst of any team he's ever coached. And Crowe has been in the business 25 years.

Just Ask Stengel

Bums Could Scout Tigers TheEasyWay

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, Aug. 23 (NYHT). When the game started, Rex Barney was seen in a front-row box near third base, straining forward over the grandstand railing as though restraining himself from clambering onto the field. It was, somebody observed thoughtfully, the first time this year Rex had been that close to the pitching mound without walking anybody.

Red Smith

"Probably," said the Yankees' Red Patterson, who is not notably impartial, "he came over to see some good baseball for a change." "More likely," somebody else said, "the Dodgers left him at home to scout the Tigers for the World Series."

Everybody in Yankee Stadium today was thinking in terms of the World Series, including, probably, the Brooklyn pitcher who has been elected least likely to suffer from train sickness. As the teams bunch up these days on the front end of the American League race, every series between contenders becomes a big series. And this three-day entertainment with the Tigers, wherein New York is chipping away Detroit's lead, is assuredly the most vital for the Yankees thus far.

"I had to win yesterday," Casey Stengel was saying before the game. 'I got to win today. I got to have two out of these three games, and here they give us the only pitcher that's ahead of us." He jerked his thumb in the direction of Art Houtteman, who was taking batting practice with the Tigers.

"He's the only guy who's won four from us, isn't he?" Casey said.

"THIS CLUB" meant the Tigers. Mr. Stengel is not an inarticulate man, nor even taciturn, but he has moral scruples against mentioning any names whatever when he talks. It is up to the listener to fill in the gaps, thus:

"They know what they're doing out there all the time. They keep putting the pressure on you right along—seventh, eighth inning—when you think you got 'em beat. Look what they got.

"Their outfield right now is the best in the league, between you and I. The fellow in center (John Groth), well, last year he was green but now he's a fielder. And those other guys Hoot Evers and Vic Wertz), well, this fellow (Red Rolfe) says he ain't getting enough home runs as if anybody ever did; but that big right fielder I notice, has hit about 19, and I think six of 'em off of me."

Then the ball game started, and in a little while it was clear what Casey had meant when he said the Tigers always knew what they were doing. In the fifth inning, with New York protecting a lead of 1 to 0, the Tigers put their first two batsmen on base and Houtteman came up in a situation which cried aloud for a sacrifice.

Johnny Mize came down from first base to crowd Houtteman, hoping to field the bunt and throw for a force play at third, so Houtteman slashed at the first pitch, slicing the ball past Mize. The ball was foul but it warned Mize back, whereupon Houtteman put down a good bunt, moving the runners ahead.

DETROIT didn't score, however, and the Yankee half of the inning opened with Houtteman pinking Phil Rizzuto with a pitch. Tom Meany, up in the press box, was reminded of the last time Houtteman hit Rizzuto.

"The Yankees scored seven runs that inning," he recalled, "and Garry Schumacher said, 'Cripes, he couldn't've had more trouble if he'd hit a cop."

This time the hitting of Rizzuto started a four-run inning, which was Houtteman's last. When the youngster left the mound, Barney left his box.

"He saw Ted Lyons wave Houtteman out," Mr. Patterson explained, "and Rex is so used to that he thought Lyons meant him."

In another box, a beauteous acquaintance of Houtteman waited a few minutes and then she also departed. Thus she didn't see the Tigers support another point Mr. Stengel had made, about how Detroit "keeps crowding you."

The Tigers crowded the Yankees. Evers hit a two-run homer and made the score read 5 to 2. Yogi Berra got the runs back with a homer but Detroit scored three times in the eighth, making it 7 to 5.

The first batter reached base in the ninth, so each of the last three Tigers at bat represented the typing run. Tom Ferrick got them all out and saved the game for New York. But they were crowding him.

Long Held by Reds, Berlin Yank Is Freed

Berlin, Aug. 23 (AP).—Pvt. Alfred W. Yankow, 27, of Tampa, Fla., said today he doesn't have the faintest idea why he was slugged four months ago and shanghaied into the Russian Zone for steady interrogation.

He had a hunch, he said, that East Zone Communists may have chosen him as a likely prospect to desert and be used as a subject for propaganda; or he may have been mistaken for some other soldier.

Yankow described himself as a "simple rifleman" without any knowledge of, or access to, military information of importance in espionage. At one place, he said, a Russian major asked him a lot of questions about United States troop installations and displayed considerable interest in the United States Document Center in Berlin.

Called Dumb Soldier

"I told him I didn't know anything about that and he said I must be a pretty damn dumb soldier," Yankow related. "I told him I couldn't help that."

He said he was abducted by two men in a car only three blocks from the top-secret American Document Center in West Berlin, where all the old Nazi files are stored. Yankow was in the neighborhood to call on a German girl.

He finally was released after considerable negotiation on August 14.

Unaffected By Imprisonment

The Berlin military post said his story checked and that his rugged physique was not affected by imprisonment. Yankow said he guessed he had been slugged with a blackjack by the two men who kidnapped him, because "everything went black."

They put him in an attic and he broke the tiles with his fist and escaped. By chance he stumbled into a Soviet maneuver area and two East German police picked him up and "arrested me, I guess." They took him "to a place called Mahlow," about 20 miles south of Berlin.

"They never told me what for and nobody ever did after that, although I kept asking every day what this was all about," Yankow said.

"They kept asking me why I don't give up my citizenship and live in the Russian paradise," Yankow continued. "I said: 'Do you think I'm crazy?' And they soon dropped that kind of talk."

On June 17 he broke out again, but a general alarm resulted in a manhunt and he surrendered after hiding in a swamp for 24 hours. For one week, he said, he had no food, until a Russian doctor ordered that he be given some.

He also got four cigarettes a day—a brand called Solo, made in Dresden.

Belgian Quits Channel Swim Despite 'Chaser'

Dover, England, Aug. 23 (U.P.).—Fernand Du Moulin, the fun-loving Belgian, who washed the salty waters from his mouth with champagne, tonight abandoned history's first attempt to swim the English Channel both ways nonstop.

But the 37-year-old industrialist, who paddled the 21-mile stretch of water one way last year, claimed a new world's record for even trying.

The 232-pound swimmer lunched in mid-channel today on champagne, roast chicken drumsticks, ham sandwiches, cheese, fruit and coffee.

'Declaration of Strasbourg' To Offset 'Stockholm Appeal'

Strasbourg, Aug. 23 (AP).—European Socialist leaders have drafted a Declaration of Strasbourg calling for "peace without appeasement."

The declaration will seek to counteract the Communist-sponsored Stockholm "peace appeal" throughout the world. It will be presented to the European Consultative Assembly this week with the powerful backing of British Laborites and European Socialists. Quick adoption is expected.

The declaration "will be the West's answer to Communism's phony peace talk," said one Socialist. It asks the 125 representatives of the 15 Western nations to pledge:

1. Support to the United Nations in the Korean conflict and support against aggression anywhere.
2. Opposition to appeasement of aggressors in any form.
3. Active efforts to solve the world's problems peacefully.

Chief authors of the declaration are Maurice Edelman, British Labor MP, and Belgian Socialists Henri Rollin and Victor Larock.

The declaration may be opened to signatures by citizens of all the free world just as has the Communist-inspired Stockholm appeal.

Winston Churchill's proposal for a unified European army faced a three-month delay due at least partly to British Laborite and Scandinavian opposition. British Conservative Duncan Sandys, who drafted a 20-point blueprint for the army and a European defense ministry, told reporters only a progress report has gone to the general affairs committee.

Meantime, Australian Foreign Minister Percy Spender, in a news conference here, warned that Western Europe must unite in defense or perish. This was taken as support for the Churchill proposal and a slap at the British Labor Government's "wait-and-see" attitude.

Quantico Advances

Wichita, Kans., Aug. 23 (AP).—The Quantico Marines defeated the Barksdale Bombers, 8-7, with a run in the ninth inning in the second round of the National Semi-Pro Baseball Tournament here last night.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

In-Grade Promotions System Under Attack But One Assault Fails

Now the system of in-grade promotions for Federal workers is under attack on Capitol Hill.

A move was made in the Senate—and defeated by voice vote—to stop all in-grade raises to Federal workers in event the Government slaps a freeze on prices and wages.

The amendment, offered by Senator Williams (R., Del.) to the economic control bill, also would have blocked all other Federal pay boosts except those made by reason of transfers to higher-grade jobs. In urging approval, Williams said:

"My amendment provides that at the time the President declares price and wage controls in effect he must, at the same time, freeze wages and salaries of all civilian Government employes.

"During the last war this provision was not in effect, and we had the unfair situation where Government employes were receiving salary increases through in-grade promotions while wages in private industry were frozen."

Senator Williams should look up the record. It will show that Federal employe salaries during World War II lagged far behind those in private industry.

PAY BOOST? And while we're on the salary subject, the first major step toward a new pay boost for Government people has been made by an employe union.

In convention yesterday at Cleveland, the AFL's important National Federation of Postoffice Clerks instructed its executive committee to seek pay raises to offset rising living costs. The union plan is certain to get the general indorsement of other employe groups.

FHA: Despite a record business, Federal Housing Administration has given out lay-off notices to several hundred employes, including about 100 here. One employe with only eight months to go before he could retire was among them. The cutback was in anticipation of congressional approval of the rider to require nondefense agencies like FHA to fire 10 percent of their employes.

RIDER: Senate-House conferees are tentatively slated to meet today on the Byrd-Bridges 10-percent-cut rider. Opponents of the amendment are reported planning to:

1. Attempt to rewrite it to give the Budget Bureau authority to make cuts totaling half a billion dollars in nondefense spending, or, (2) insist on exemption of additional agencies such as Agriculture's meat inspection service and credit agencies, Internal Revenue, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, Bureau of Standards, Civil Aeronautics Authority, and Labor's Bureau of Employment Security, among others. One way or another, the above agencies are slated for war-connected jobs, and if they lay off employes now they will have to hire them back later on, a costly process.

NSRB: The Civil Service Commission has given the National Security Resources Board authority to hire 150 persons without regard to CSC regulations. In other words, those jobs will be exempt from the merit system.

BEST-SELLER: A booklet recently published by Agriculture's Graduate School is in demand by Federal official. It's title: "What We Learned in Public Administration During World War II." It's a series of lectures on the World War II set-up.

BOND BILL: The Senate Expenditures Committee yesterday killed the House-approved bill to have Uncle Sam buy and pay for surety bonds an estimated 1,100,000 Federal workers had to buy themselves last year. Economy was the reason.

Interracial Day Camp Ends 8-Week Season

The American Friends Service Committee today ends its eight-week interracial day camp in Rock Creek Park.

The last program will be a parents-campers get-together at 7 p. m. in Rock Creek Park under the Taft Bridge, west of the Calvert st. bridge. About 50 campers attended the program last week. AFSC officials said attendance has been about 80 percent Negro.

Boisterous Mockingbird Rules The Roost at Bethesda Home

The Washington Post

A.W.O.L.—"Where have you been?" Herbie Thomas, 7, of 8516 Hazelwood dr., Bethesda, Md., asks his pet mocking bird. Chirper, who likes to visit the neighbors, has been Herbie's pet since his father, Herbert S. Thomas, jr., almost cut him down while mowing the lawn two weeks ago

All rumors to the contrary notwithstanding, a certain Bethesda mockingbird named Chirper does not smoke cigars or whistle "Dixie."

Chirper, a domesticated songbird, is not without his talents, though.

"He" (the sex is really undetermined) can beg for food, ride the finger of any accommodating human, and cause the best steak dinner ever cooked to grow cold.

He is omnivorous, boisterous, and sleeps in a cardboard house in the kitchen of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert S. Thomas, jr., at 8516 Hazelwood dr., Bethesda.

Chirper really is the joint pride of the Thomases and their neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver S. Boswell, jr., at 8518.

Thomas, an Army civil engineer, almost mowed Chirper down two weeks ago while manicuring his front lawn. The bird, young and half-starved, was taken in and fed.

Today, he is "fat as a butterball." He eats tomatoes, chicken feed and worms, carefully dug by the Thomases. He also eats Hollywod "diet" bread, but, as Mrs. Boswell says, "it hasn't helped his figure."

Chirper runs his humans pretty much at will. Monday night, for example, "he came to the back door and begged and begged for food with his mouth open, making squeaky noises. You could hear him for blocks," Mrs. Boswell said.

The Boswells had steak and french fries on the table, but food grew cold while the couple "just about dug up all the worms in Glenwood" to keep Chirper happy.

A 'Gentleman Police Officer' Will Retire on August 31

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, who has achieved both a local and national reputation as an expert in traffic control, bows out of the Metropolitan Police Department this month after more than 31 years service.

Miller's retirement is effective August 31.

Principally noted for his efforts in establishment of the Accident Investigation Unit in 1941, Inspector Miller also organized the traffic school for violators, from which more than 7000 have been graduated in two years of operation.

Inspector Albert I. Bullock, an associate of Miller, yesterday described him as "one of the most sincere men I've ever met in my life, and one of the most conscientious."

'Gentleman Police Officer'

Within the department, Miller, who has been assistant police superintendent since April, is known as the "gentleman police officer."

Said Bullock, "He's very soft spoken, but he is also very firm—he never takes advantage of anybody."

Born in Stafford County, Va., Miller, who is 53, came to Washington in 1917 and joined the police department in March, 1919. He was promoted through the ranks to captain in July, 1935. During 1939 and 1940 he became the first police officer on the Metropolitan force to attend the nine-month Northwestern University Traffic Institute.

Miller delivered the valedictory when he graduated from the school in May, 1940, and the following month was made a traffic inspector.

Conducted Bottleneck Surveys

Establishment of the AIU shortly after his return to active duty on the force has resulted in more realistic statistics on accident trouble spots in Washington, and has aided in traffic engineering for prevention of accidents.

As head of the Traffic Investigation Bureau, Inspector Miller stressed education, enforcement and engineering and conducted surveys on traffic bottlenecks.

Police officials said yesterday that the school for traffic violators, with its more than 7000 graduates, has shown the "repeater" graduates as low as 3 percent.

Inspector Miller twice refused promotion to assistant superintendent to remain with the traffic bureau. He appeared before the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons early this month after he said he was suffering from arthritis and a back injury received last year.

Inspector Miller, who has received four commendations, lives at 7804 Radnor rd., Bethesda.

A testimonial dinner in honor of Inspector Miller will be given by the American Automobile Association September 5 at 6:45 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel.

2 Veteran Policemen Retired for Disability

The District Commissioners have retired two veteran policemen because of physical disability, it was announced yesterday.

One is Corpl. John W. Groves, 38, attached to No. 10 Precinct and a member of the Metropolitan Police Department for nearly 15 years.

The other is Pvt. Earl Johnson, 50, who worked in the supply room at police headquarters. Johnson had been a fireman for three years before joining the police department in 1933.

FISHING AHEAD—Inspector Arthur E. Miller, an assistant superintendent of the Metropolitan Police Department, will retire from the force August 31. He has been busy readying his fishing gear for a trip south.

4 New Polio Cases Reported in Area

Four new polio cases reported yesterday sent the year's total for Greater Washington to 178.

The eighty-first case in the District, the sixteenth and seventeenth in Arlington County, and the twenty-eighth in Prince Georges County were recorded, as follows:

Businessmen to Give 6 American U. Courses

Six new evening courses to be taught by local businessmen have been announced by the Division of Business Studies of American University.

They are: "Direct Mail Selling," "Life Insurance," "Mortgage Financing," "Sales Management," "Fashion in Retailing" and "Mathematics of Merchandising." Registration for the Fall session begins September 12.

Lawyer Asks DistrictCourt For His Son

Files Habeas Corpus Petition, Charges Boy Was Convicted Without Reason

A patent lawyer who charges that his 16-year-old son was denied justice in Juvenile Court petitioned District Court yesterday to free the lad by habeas corpus action.

The father is Henry G. Bartsch of 126 C st. nw. He said that court authorities, by "prearrangement" with his estranged wife, may send the son, Henry H. Bartsch, to a New York reform school. The mother has legal custody of the boy.

The elder Bartsch said the boy is now being detained by relatives on a Virginia estate, and efforts to free him have been futile.

Bartsch stated in his petition that when the boy was tried recently Judge Edith Cockrill refused to let him plead "not guilty." Bartsch was hampered, he said, in his attempts to defend the boy and records in the case were deprived him.

Bartsch described the Juvenile Court procedure as "Iron Curtain" and "Star Chamber." He said that no evidence was produced that the boy used an automobile and took property without "authorization," as was charged.

Bartsch attached to his petition newspaper articles describing aspects of the case and of the need expressed by some for modification of Juvenile Court.

Realty Bequest May Increase Play Facilities

A parking lot at 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave., se., tentatively approved yesterday by the District Board of Zoning Adjustment, may indirectly lead to more public playground facilities.

When Robert Stead died in Philadelphia seven years ago, he requested that his half-acre lot on the southeast corner of the intersection be used as a public playground. When it was later decided there was more need for a playground at 16th and Church sts., nw., the trustees of Stead's estate tried to put the Southeast property to work to pay for play equipment.

Attorney A. Murray Preston told the BZA yesterday that the best offers had come from chain stores. They would lease the property, he said, if a strip of land still zoned residential could be used for customer parking.

BZA Member Robert O. Clouser said the board agreed to permit use of the property as a temporary parking lot after certain conditions are met—chiefly a specific agreement to screen the lot from nearby homes. "Temporary" means permission to continue use of the lot must be secured again from the BZA after a stipulated time.

The BZA also approved a request of George Washington University to establish a parking lot at the northeast corner of 23d and H sts. nw. Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, university vice president, said the lot would park about 300 cars and would be used principally to serve the university hospital.

Plans to build a parking garage, previously announced by the university, will be held up until it finds whether the lot will suffice, Grant said.

At the request of all parties involved, the BA deferred for a month action on a request of the Boys' Club of Washington for permission for a gas station on the site of its Georgetown clubhouse at Pennsylvania ave. and M st. nw.

The club wants to sell its property to the American Oil Co. so it can build a new clubhouse. The Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown wants the Government to buy it for a park. John Nolen, jr., planning director for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, said NCPPC is interested and is negotiating with the parties to see what can be worked out.

Human Chain Saves Boy, Firemen in Flood; 2.48-Inch Rain Maroons Many in Homes, Cars swept from the cycle. He said Gosnell grabbed the side of a bridge, about 5 feet tall, at the entrance of the cemetery. Sergt. Beall said he had to wade 200 feet through water five feet deep to reach the youth.

In Capitol Heights, firemen rescued one of their own members, Jack Devine, when he and his mother were trapped in an automobile at 61st and Kingston rd. Firemen said the water was lapping at the car's door handles when they reached it.

A crippled woman and a child were rescued from a house at 59th and H sts., in Capitol Heights, where they were trapped in water 2 to 3 feet deep. A similar rescue of several children was made at a house at 6100 Kingston rd. in Capitol Heights. Two bridges in the town were washed away by the flood at 59th and F sts. and in the 6100 block of A st.

Three small children were reported lost in Fort Dupont Park during the storm, and joint efforts of Park and Metropolitan Police located them and returned them home without injury. Two were 1-year-old girls, Eileen Naden, address not known, and Jean Swenson, of 3525 Pope st. se. The third was an unidentified 13-year-old boy.

The rain, which began at 1:30 p. m., stopped at 6:10 p. m. after 2.48 inches had fallen. The Weather Bureau said the record for a six-hour period is 5.38 inches. Last Saturday night, Weather Bureau instruments recorded 3.86 inches during the heavy downpour.

The storm brought substantial property damage to both Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

At least six cars were inundated in the Military Highway Underpass at Nichols ave. se. in water that was reported at a 12-foot crest.

At Fort McNair, firemen had to pump out the gymnasium and the basement of the Army War College.

At a florist shop at 1915 Good Hope rd. se., the storm took a macabre turn when the first floor of the store was flooded and flowers floated aimlessly about.

The District Sewer Department reported more than 125 trouble calls for flooded sewers, cellars and streets during the storm. Potomac Electric Power Co. reported its damage at a minimum, with some light poles washed out, five or six trouble calls in the eastern section of the city, and a few limbs over electric wires.

In Arlington County, the Jubal Early homes project was flooded to a depth of 5 feet in some sections. Residents reported houses on Eads st. between 20th and 23d sts. were being flooded up to the first floors.

While Bladensburg Peace Cross did not flood, residences in Boulevard Heights, Hillside and Bradbury Heights in Prince Georges County reported flooded cellars, and water "up to the stoves" in some residences.

Yesterday's rain brought out every available motorcycle policeman to keep traffic moving on the bridge exits from Washington. In spite of this, however, traffic on South Capitol st. bridge was completely stalled for a while. On Mt. Vernon Blvd. at about 6 p. m. traffic was backed up for three miles from the 14th st. bridge and all intersections from the bridge to the boulevard were badly jammed.

Streetcar traffic was stalled for 35 minutes at 12th and Pennsylvania ave. se. when a fire engine got stuck in the mud trying to avoid snarled traffic.

Park Police closed off all entrances to the Rock Creek fords early in the rainfall. Six cars were reported under water in the Military Highway underpass at Nichols ave. se. Police said that Overlook ave. at the Bolling Base entrance also was under water.

Police reported a number of minor accidents as the heavy afternoon traffic crawled out of Washington. While they reported no injuries during the storm, they said each minor accident simply stalled traffic in increasing ratio.

Benning rd. ne. was flooded for 1 mile between G st. se. and 14th st. ne. Water stood to a depth of 4 feet at one point. There was a similar stand of water at Minnesota ave. and Dix st. ne., and the basement of a Woolworth's dime store suffered rain damage at that location.

In Falls Church, a flash flood restricted traffic on W. Broad st. near Lee st. to a one-lane section of the road for half an hour during the storm.

The rain forced cancellation of the Washington-Cleveland ball game, scheduled for yesterday afternoon.

A flood of storm-produced telephone calls around 5 p. m. slowed C. & P. dial telephone service and resulted in delays for a brief period, John Howard, general C. & P. commercial manager, said. The situation cleared as the volume of calls dropped off.

In addition, a cable failure in the vicinity of 12th and Constitution ave. nw. affected about 400 "pairs" providing service to as many telephones. Crews were immediately dispatched to repair the water damage.

Cloudy Predicted Today

The Weather Bureau does not foresee a repetition of yesterday's rains today. Outlook is for cloudy, humid weather, with a high of about 80 degrees. The weather man called yesterday's deluge a "local shower" and said there had been no reports of a general rainfall over the Eastern seaboard. Only other sector nearby where rain was reported yesterday was in Richmond.

District Man Near Death; Shot by Wife During Row

Police Hold Woman After Climax to Drinking Bout at Couple's Residence

Arthur Chappell, 38, was in critical condition at Garfield Hospital last night after, police said, he was shot by his wife, Marilyn, 38, during a quarrel in their home at 39 V st. nw.

Police said Chappell was shot at about 4:30 p. m. while he lay in bed. Lieut. Richard Felber of the homicide squad said Mrs. Chappell admitted firing several shots at her husband with a .25 caliber Belgian make automatic.

One of the shots, Felber said, struck Chappel, an iron worker, directly above the navel. Doctors said that it was doubtful that he would survive.

Felber said police had pieced together this story:

The couple, married four years, had been drinking wine continuously for two days. Both were in bed intoxicated when an argument developed. Mrs. Chappell got up, went to a bureau drawer, got the automatic and fired at her husband.

Felber said that after the shooting the woman hid the weapon in a radio-phonograph combination. At the time of the shooting, Mrs. Chappell's mother, Mrs. Etta Owens, about 75, was sitting on the front porch of the home.

Police said Mrs. Chappell was taken to the women's bureau after the shooting to "sober up." She was later charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and held without bond.

Silver Spring Builder Killed By Bulldozer

A paratroop veteran of World War II who had been in the construction business for the past three years was crushed to death yesterday morning when a bulldozer toppled on him.

Mr. Quigg

The victim, Samuel H. Quigg, 29, of 8111 Hahona dr., Silver Spring, Md., was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. Betty Young of Gallinger Hospital staff.

A certificate of accidental death was issued by Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner.

The accident, police said, occurred at about 8:30 a. m., while Quigg was supervising the loading of an eight-ton bulldozer on a trailer in an alley in the rear of 6013 3d st. nw.

Quigg, a partner in the Humphrey & Quigg Construction Co. of 27 Carroll ave., Takoma Park, Md., had undertaken personally to load the bulldozer on the trailer so it could be moved to another construction project at University Hills, Md.

The regular operator of the bulldozer, Archie Dellelce, 41, of 1923 Otis st. ne., told police Quigg had instructed him to report for work directly to the University Hills project.

According to police, Quigg neglected to lower the bulldozer scoop which would have balanced the weight of the machine as it went up the ramp. Instead, he left it elevated and as the bulldozer reached the top of the ramp it flipped over on its back and Quigg was caught underneath.

No. 2 Rescue Squad, its ambulance and fire fighting apparatus went to the scene. With the aid of about 20 workmen, the fire department personnel were able to shift the trailer sufficiently in 20 minutes to remove Quigg's crushed body.

Quigg is survived by his wife, Marjorie; three children, Richard, 6; Carol Ann, 4, and Sharon, 21 months, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Quigg of Arlington.

Area Real Estate Man's Farm Wins Pastures Contest

Baltimore, Aug. 23 (AP).—Eugene Bowie Roberts, Landover, Md., real estate dealer, today received the top award in the State's Greener Pastures contest for pasture management on his Fairwood Farm near Bowie.

Roberts gave Ray Cather, his farm manager, credit for winning the annual contest. It is sponsored by the University of Maryland extension service and the Maryland Production and Marketing Administration to promote better use of grasslands and improvement of the livestock and dairy industries.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, made the presentation at a luncheon and also passed out 150 certificates to community, county, and area winners.

L. H. Bean Plans Talk

Louis H. Bean, the elections forecaster who picked Truman in 1948, will discuss the coming elections at a luncheon meeting in the American Veterans Committee clubhouse, 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw., at 12:30 p. m. today.

Tydings to Campaign After 'Must' Bills Pass

By The Associated Press

"Must" legislation is pinning Senator Tydings (D., Md.) to the Nation's Capital, he said yesterday, but after its passage he will campaign "vigorously and actively" for his nomination and reelection.

The Senator conceded that friends have been asking him to leave Washington "and become active in my own behalf in the primary campaign."

Tydings, seeking his sixth consecutive Senate term, said under "normal conditions" he would have answered the call and "dealt with some of the false statements, half-truths, and self-serving propaganda which I realize have gained wide circulation."

But the most important thing for the country is to win the war in Korea, and Tydings will stay in Washington until enactment of major "wartime legislation," he declared.

John Marshall Butler, aspirant for the Republican nomination to the Senate, meantime, predicted in a statement that the "whitewash brush will swing next across the public's questions about our lack of preparedness in Korea."

Mahoney—chief rival of Governor Lane for the nomination—defended as accurate a chart he has been using to show that Maryland taxes increased 80 percent during the Lane Administration.

The Governor called the chart "misleading propaganda," since it "failed to show" that 55 percent of the revenues collected by the State are turned back to counties and municipalities.

Radcliffe said Mahoney admits that Governor Lane's plans for school, hospital, and roads improvements are necessary and "doesn't suggest that the Governor has been going into the wrong direction or that, if elected Governor, he (Mahoney) would reverse the present general course of Governor Lane.

"He claims, however, he could do the job better, yet he did not originate the (improvement) plans or any similar ones, had no part in carrying them out, and has had little experience in public office."

Contract Awarded For Willston School

Fairfax County school officials yesterday awarded a $99,431 contract for construction of a long-sought elementary school in Willston subdivision at Seven Corners.

The contract went to the construction firm of Eugene Simpson & Brother of Alexandria, lowest of three bidders. It provides for construction of an eight-room brick and cinderblock structure, the basic unit of what eventually will be a fully equipped 16-room building.

The county school board agreed to engage the Alexandria firm after rejecting two other bids, both in excess of $100,000. The board did not ask the builder to specify a date for completion of the project because of uncertainty of building conditions.

The new school will serve elementary pupils in Willston and several other nearby subdivisions, where parents have been clamoring for added school facilities for more than a year.

School board sponsorship of the project was agreed on last month after members of the board shelved an earlier proposal to have the school built by the developers of Willston. Under the earlier plan, the board would have paid for the school through annual "rentals," but failure to reach agreement on the amount of yearly payments killed the plan.

The school will be financed from the board's operating fund, school officials said.

Victims 'Gullible'

Man Booked On 4 Counts Of Bad Checks

"You'd be amazed how gullible these merchants, are," a 54-year-old man told Bethesda Police yesterday after they charged him with forging four checks worth $935 in Bethesda stores.

Galleher

Detectives, who had been hunting him for nearly a year, charged William Cary Galleher of Leesburg, Va., with forgery, uttering, and false pretenses.

Bethesda Police withheld the names of the Bethesda businessmen, they said were bilked. But Galleher told them he went into one store, planked down a forged check for $500.

"And they didn't even ask for identification," he added.

Police said Galleher, described as a well dressed "prominent-looking" man, had passed the bad checks during the last 11 months, all in Bethesda.

He forged the names of "prominent business people in Bethesda and Silver Spring" to the checks, detectives said, declining to identify the persons whose names were used.

Police said one check was for $500, one for $250, another for $150, and the fourth for $35.

Galleher, arrested in the District Tuesday night on a fugitive warrant, waived extradition and was returned to Montgomery County police yesterday for booking and questioning.

Detectives said Galleher had admitted forging the four checks. He faces a preliminary hearing at 9:30 a. m. Friday in Bethesda Police Court.

District Police records showed Galleher had been arrested in Washington six times since 1932 on bad check charges, the last in January, 1950.

Mrs. Louderback Dies

Stanley, Va., Aug. 23 (AP).—A cerebral hemorrhage proved fatal at her home here last night to Mrs. Cora Driver Louderback, wife of former Delegate C. C. Louderback.

A graduate of Bridgewater College, she taught in the public schools of Rockingham, Botetourt and Page counties, and was active in educational, religious and charitable affairs in the Page County area.

Her husband, a veteran of some 20 years in the Virginia House of Delegates, was chairman of the House Appropriations Committee when he retired from the legislature in 1949.

Nominations Confirmed

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nominations of Carlton Skinner of Connecticut to be governor of Guam and of Clarence J. McCormick of Indiana to be a director of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Relatives Weep at Soldier's Burial

W. J. Hamer Named Bureau Section Chief

Dr. Walter J. Hamer, a former member of the National Defense Research Council and the Manhattan Project, has been appointed chief of the Electrochemistry Section of the National Bureau of Standards.

He succeeds Dr. George W. Vinal, who retired July 1.

Dr. Hamer, a native of Altoona, Pa., has been with the Bureau of Standards since 1935.

The bureau also announced the appointment of Max L. Libman at patent advisor to the bureau. He will be responsible for reviewing inventions made by members of bureau and for starting action to obtain patents on "novel developments."

Trade Council Head Dies

New York, Aug. 23 (U.P.).—Eugene P. Thomas, 74, president of the National Foreign Trade Council since 1933, died today. Mr. Thomas once was a vice president of United States Steel

Sergt. Turner, Korea Victim, Buried in Rain at Arlington

Rain darkened the skies yesterday as Arlington Cemetery received the body of the first enlisted man killed in Korea to be buried there.

It was the same sort of persistent rain that had made for days of hell in Korea for Sergt. Ernest K. Turner of Berwick, Pa., and his comrades.

Turner, 35, won four decorations during nine months of front line combat in Europe during World War II. He was wounded in Korea on July 28 and died four days later.

Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr., and other Government officials were present yesterday for his miiltary funeral.

After a ceremony in Fort Myer Chapel, the Army Band, waiting outside, played "Nearer My God to Thee" as Turner's flag-draped casket was lifted to the caisson which, drawn by seven matched grays, then proceeded to the burial site.

A rain-drenched canopy covered the grave. The sergeant's mother and father and other members of the family wept quietly as the services were concluded.

Three gun volleys rang out, taps was sounded, and then the flag, wet from the rain, was solemnly folded and presented to the sergeant's mother, Mrs. Russell Turner.

Two sisters and a brother of the sergeant were there. The brother, Robert Turner of Cleveland, was wounded in Europe during World War II. A third brother, Staff Sergt. Day G. Turner, was killed in Europe in 1945 after winning the Congressional Medal of Honor. He is buried in the Third Army Cemetery in Luxembourg.

Frank Phillips, Oil Company Founder, Dies

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 23 (U.P.). Multimillionaire Frank Phillips, board chairman of the Phillips Petroleum Co., died today in Atlantic City Hospital after a brief illness.

Mr. Phillips

Doctors said death was due to a gall bladder infection complicated by heart trouble. A son and a daughter-in-law Mr. and Mrs. John G. Phillips, were with him when he died.

The 76-year-old Bartlesville, Okla., oil magnate underwent an emergency operation for an abdominal ailment Monday night. His condition was aggravated by a weak heart.

Mr. Phillips, a Nebraska farm boy who built his business into one of the largest independent oil companies in the world, has been spending the summer with friends at a resort hotel. He became ill Sunday.

He retired as president of the firm in 1937.

Mr. Phillips, the man who built a 625 million dollar oil empire, got his start digging potatoes for an Iowa farmer for 10 cents a day.

His first steady job was in a Creston (Iowa) barber shop at the age of 14. Later he took a job selling bonds.

Funeral Services Held For Mrs. H. M. Bratter

Funeral services for Mrs. Herbert M. Bratter, 55, former Red Cross and social worker and resident of Washington for 22 years, were held yesterday at the W. W. Chambers funeral home, 3072 M st. nw. Interment was at Cedar Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Bratter worked for the Red Cross here at national headquarters and in the middle west. She served as a disaster relief worker after the Illinois-Indiana tornado in 1923. She was born in Jay County, Indiana.

She is survived by her husband, Herbert M. Bratter, of 3000 39th st. nw., a daughter, Miss Junia Bratter of Oberlin, Ohio, and two brothers, Harry C. Hudson, Grants Pass, Oreg., and Jay T. Hudson, Tulsa, Okla.

Bill Passed To Exempt Art Loans From Tax

Congress yesterday voted to exempt foreign-owned art loans to the National Gallery from Federal and District taxes.

The decision was made when the Senate gave unanimous consent to wa House-approved resolution and sent measure to the White House.

An immediate effect of the bill would be to remove a hurdle to the extended showing of the famous C. S. Gulbenkan collection of paintings by old masters to begin at the Gallery in October.

Gallery officials explained Gulbenkian had expressed his intention not to let the collection remain if the bill were not passed at this session. The officials also pointed out that the bill would remove similar barriers to future loans from abroad.

The bill would accomplish these results by exempting from Federal estate taxes, and from District estate and personal property taxes any imported works of art loaned to the trustees of the National Gallery by a nonresident alien.

The Senate report, obviously referring to the Gulbenkian collection, declared the owner had stated he could not allow the paintings to remain long in this country without the bill that would remove the estate tax collection in the event he dies while the collection is in the United States.

The Senate also approved and sent to the White House a bill authorizing the Government to give the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church 600 square feet of land for its new building. The church is at New York ave. and H st. nw.

Several Senate-approved bills, including one to strengthen the powers of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission are slated for House District Committee action at 10:30 a. m. today.

McKeldin Asks Support From Md. Democrats

Theodore R. McKeldin, Republican candidate for Governor of Maryland, appealed last night for support of the state's Democrats with the assertion that the present administration is not "truly Democratic."

Addressing 150 persons at a rally sponsored by the Young Republicans Club of Prince Georges County in the County Service Building at Hyattsville, McKeldin said that present Democratic officeholders are "merely New Dealers and Fair Dealers who have nothing in common with the true Jeffersonian Democrats."

The former Baltimore mayor conceded that there are not enough Republican votes in the State to assure a party victory and said "the only way we can win is to rely on discriminating Democrats who have good taste."

McKeldin assailed the national administration as well as incumbent Marland officeholders for an "extravagant" policy that is "leading this country to bankruptcy."

To correct the evils of the higher administrations, however, he said the voters "have got to start at the grass roots," by eliminating machine candidates in local elections.

The gubernatorial candidate said he was not prepared to discuss a party platform at this time because the party's policies will be determined in full at the annual state convention in September.

"But you can be assured that we'll be prepared to discuss questions on any issue of this campaign when the platform is adopted," McKeldin declared.

He then charged that Governor Lane avoided all mention of a Maryland sales tax in his last campaign and then "jammed" the tax through the legislature six months after he was in office.

J. L. Fleming Dead of Heart Attack in Md.

John Lesher Fleming, 54, a special agent in the Washington office of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., died of a heart attack Tuesday at Ocean City, Md., it was learned yesterday.

Mr. Fleming, who lived at 1630 44th st. nw., had taken his wife, Mrs. Esther Thackara Fleming, and their two daughters, Barbara and Mary, to Ocean City for a vacation. His death occurred only three days after his fifty-fourth birthday.

Mr. Fleming had been with Northwestern Mutual since 1922. A native of the District, he attended Central High School and was president of the "C" Club there. He was graduated in 1914. He was also a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania where he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

He was a member of the University of Pennsylvania Alumni of the District and served with AEF tank forces in Europe in World War I.

He was the son of the late George E. Fleming, former vice president of the Union Trust Co. here.

In addition to his immediate family, Mr. Fleming is survived by a brother, Carroll H. Fleming of Orchard Park, N. Y., and three sisters, Mrs. Frances Winslow of Summit, N. J.; Miss Phoebe Fleming of New Brunswick, N. J., and Mrs. Carol F. Burke of Carmel, Calif.

75 Youth Talk Delegates Meet Friday

Seventy-five high school and college age youths who will participate in planning for the Mid-century White House Conference on Children and Youth will meet here Friday in a two-day preliminary session.

The sessions will be held in room 5051 of the Federal Security Agency Building. All delegates are members of the Advisory Council on Youth Participation to the White House Conference.

Melvin A. Glasser, executive director of the conference, said the delegates will develop a report on youth participation, for use when the conference meets in December. They also will determine a basis for selecting delegates to the December meeting.

Among those who will address the delegates are Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau and secretary of the National Committee; Arnulf M. Pins, of Paterson, N. J., chairman of the Advisory Council on Youth Participation, and execu-

George Farrell Dies; Retired Farm Official

George E. Farrell, 68, 4514 Connecticut ave., died unexpectedly Monday at the home of his son, Dr. George R. Farrell, 1739 Crestwood dr. nw. Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament, 6001 Western ave.

Mr. Farrell came to Washington in 1917, with the Extension Service of the United States Department of Agriculture.

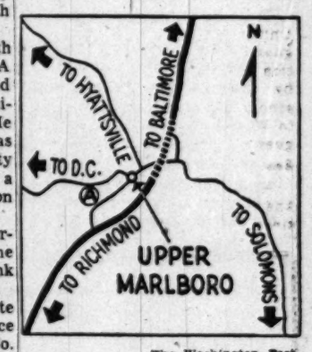
Mr. Farrell is survived by his wife, Mary F. Farrell, and two sons, Dr. George R. Farrell, and John Farrell, who is a medical student at Harvard and is studying in Europe this summer.

Marlboro Road Paving Needed, Engineer Says

Resurfacing of the dangerous section of the Upper Marlboro by-pass has been recommended to the Maryland State Roads Commission.

District Engineer Joseph Chaney said yesterday that he had inspected the stretch of the by-pass from the intersection with old route 301 and for about two miles until it rejoins 301.

Chaney said the bituminous matter had seeped through the binder and caused the road to become slippery in rainy weather.



The Washington Post

TRAFFIC HAZARD—The heavy line represents Route 301 and the dotted line is the part of the new Upper Marlboro bypass on which there has been an average of an accident a day since the bypass was opened about a month ago. One death has been recorded. Oil slick and concrete posts at the intersection of the bypass with old Route 301 (A) about two miles north of Upper Marlboro, have been responsible for most of the accidents

A heavier binding material will be placed on the surface when the road is remodeled, he said. Chaney said he would recommend to the roads commission that the new surface be put on as soon as dry weather will permit.

The slippery road has accounted for nearly an accident a day since it was opened about a month ago and a State Roads Commission spokesman said this indicated there was something wrong with the road. He said Chaney had been asked to check and report recommendations.

STICKNEY, ROBERT L., Jr. In loving memory of my brother, Bobby, who passed away two years ago today.
God couldn't spare an angel, so he sent us down a Star:
A part of His blue Heaven came to bless us from afar.
And though we had him with us but just a few short years,
We will not question why, dear God, you called your starlet home.
But thank You for Your kindness all the years he was our own.
SISTER SHIRLEY.

County Fair Swirl Catches Up 8 Austrians at Gaithersburg

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Eight Austrian newspapermen, four of them from Vienna publications, visited the Montgomery County Fair at Gaithersburg, Md., yesterday.

If you have ever wondered what a continental European would do, plumped down in the center of an American county fair, these visitors furnished the answer. They did just as Americans do—ate hot dogs, pitched coins for prizes, and did their best keep dry in the near-cloudburst that swept the grounds.

The visitors have been in the United States since early June as guests of the Rockefeller Foundation through arrangements made by the University of Missouri school of journalism. Their visit to Washington and vicinity was as guests of The Washington Post.

See Many Farms

When the party left Austria they knew little about farming. But since arriving in the United States, they have been shown little else. Apparently most Americans think all Europeans are interested in farms.

They have visited Iowa corn and hog farms, and the famed agricultural college at Ames. At St. Louis they expected to visit the world's biggest brewery. Instead, they went to the Missouri Agricultural College at the State University at Columbia, where they spent 10 times as much time as at the school of journalism. The Kansas City Star sent them on a tour of Kansas wheat fields. In New Orleans they were shipped out to sugar plantations, and in Chicago to the stockyards.

No Slot Machines

Yesterday they were shown some of the work being done in the Bureau of Plant Industry with radioactive isotopes from the Atomic Energy Commission. They were taken through the Bureau of Dairy Industry's "hot" chambers where dairy cows, resistant to hot weather, are being developed.

They had one disappointment at the fair. Told that they would find slot machines in Maryland, they provided themselves with small change. Instead of playing one-arm bandits, they tossed the coins for prizes, bought ice cream sandwiches and drank cokes and pop.

In spite of the rain, more than 3000 persons attended the fair. More than 800 head of livestock have been entered, officials said.

So great was the interest displayed in the milk goats division, plans are underway to enlarge that exhibit next year into a National Milking Goat Show to run separately from the county fair. There is no national goat show now.

One of the exhibits that most attracted the visiting Austrians was the garden and household show. Home canned goods, and outstanding exhibits from Montgomery County gardens, filled the big new auditorium.

Jersey cattle: Bull calf, Glenellen Farms, Ijamsville; junior yearling bull, Ayrlawn Farms, Gaithersburg; senior yearling bull, Ayrlawn Farms; 2-year-old bull, Glenellen Farms; aged bull, N. C. Canine Pickets Win Victory in Newark

Newark, N. J., Aug. 23 (AP).—Canine pickets and irate animal lovers won a temporary victory over a city proposal to limit the number of dogs and cats in Newark homes.

Just before the start of a public hearing on the ordinance, Public Affairs Director Stephen Moran announced that the pet clause in a housing standards ordinance apparently was prepared in "undue haste."

'Old Ironsides' Model to 'Battle' Enemy at Regatta

If you weren't around when the Constitution, affectionately known as "Old Ironsides," and the British ship, the Guerriere, fought their historic sea battle during the War of 1812, drop down to the Tidal Basin during September.

A mock battle between scale models of the two historic ships will be staged on September 7, 8, 16, 22 and 23 as one of the highlights of Washington's Sesquicentennial year President's Cup Regatta.

The models, which were built from surplus whale boats and are about 30 feet long, were designed by Comdr. Carl M. J. Von Zielinski. Each boat will carry a crew of from four to six men and will fire charges of black powder.

Virginia Veterans Gain on Roll Tax

Richmond, Va., Aug. 23 (AP).—Attorney General J. L. Lindsay Almond, jr., ruled today that Virginia veterans may vote in the year of their discharge from the armed forces, and the next year, without payment of the State poll tax.

The Attorney General's opinion was delivered at the request of Levin Nock Davis, secretary of the State Board of Elections. Davis asked for a ruling because the 1950 State code omittted a 1945 act providing for the poll tax waiver for veterans.

D. C. Contractor, 8 Others Ask U. S. To Make Up Losses

A Washington contracting firm yesterday was named as one of nine firms which lost money building Veterans' Administration hospitals after the end of World War II.

It is the J. D. Hedin Construction Co., 820 Michigan ave. ne. James M. Barnes, attorney for the Hedin firm and eight others contractors, is pressing for legislation introduced by Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) to reimburse the firms.

Barnes told a Senate Labor subcommittee Congress has a "moral obligation" to "adjust the equities in these cases." He said the contractors lost money because of a lack of effective priorities for materials and because of the scarcity and in efficiency of labor. He said their losses were not their own fault.

Miss Shackleford to Be Bride

MR. AND MRS. HENRY HOWARD SHACKLEFORD of Vienna, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Mildred Leith, to John Macauley Pope, son of Mrs. Alfred M. Pope and the late Mr. Pope of Falls Church, Va.

The bride-elect, who atended George Washington University, is a graduate of Washington College of Music and was a scholarship student of Alexandria Sklarevski at the Peabody Conservatory. Her fiance attended Yale University.

DACHE'S VERSION of the suit-dress assumes dramatic proportions in this costume of tobacco brown wool. One-piece dress is slim-skirted, with simple, understated lines. Coat, in matching fabric, is silk lined and trimmed with huge collar of badger.

SUIT SILHOUETTE from the Dache collection reveals the designer's liking for novel lines. Here she makes a skirt of sheer black wool, wraps it to one side where it falls into a pointed flare. Fitted jacket is of red wool with black collar.

LUXURIOUS evening coat from Lilly Dache's fall collection, fashioned of royal blue silk satin covered with gold lace and black net. Cuffs are edged with wide bands of black fox, and the coat is shown with detachable stole of the same fur

Tobe Says...

The Balenciaga Box Coat Still Good

Third of our quartet of important fall coat silhouettes is the Balenciaga box coat. But I personally think it ranks second in popularity to the pyramid coat.

The Balenciaga box coat—which takes its name from the Paris dressmaker who introduced it in his collection last February—is a box coat with a very new line. It is bulky at the top with soft shoulders, deep armholes and wide sleeves; hangs straight but tapers toward the bottom so that it looks slim.

It's a wonderful silhouette for bulky fabrics like cashmere, chinchilla and tweed. Basically casual in feeling, it looks "dressy" when in dark colors with velvet or braid touches—a perfect all-around coat.

Dache Label Spreads From Head to Toe

By Peggy Preston

FOR years the name Lilly Dache spelled Hats—and extra special ones, at that—to a host of devoted women in this country and abroad.

But, as of the past two seasons, the coveted label of the talented little designer has found its way into many other items of apparel. First she designed a collection of custom-made clothes, including suits, coats and dresses. This season she invaded the fields of jewelry, gloves, stockings, handbags. The versatile Lilly now ranks as one of New York's foremost head-to-toe designers.

In the accompanying sketches, one sees something of the fine flare for line that this Paris-born designer brings to her new fields of endeavor. While following the accepted vogues of the season, she manages to give each costume an individual twist, a fascinating look-twice detail that marks it unmistakably a Dache design.

Fabrics and Color Must Be Seen

WHAT it is is not possible to portray in sketches, however, are the fabrics and colors she employs Some critics say Dache uses a milliner's touch in dresses. In some instances she does, with considerable success. She takes, for instance, black panne velvet, shimmering as it would on a derby hat, and drapes it into a short evening dress.

Using beautiful imported fabrics, she blends colors from necklace to stockings. An example is a dinner sheath dress of mauve silk, studded with pinpoint rhinestones. With this goes a strand necklace of rhinestones, clasped by a life-size flower of amethyst stones with leaves of simulated emeralds. Stockings are mauve, to complement the shade of the dress.

Alternates Color With Basic Black

DACHE also uses color extensively in details, alternating them against basic black dresses. Salmon pink and a tone she calls amaranthus—a deep rose-and-purple blend—are two of her favorites. She puts them in lavrics, she blends colors from neckish flower bouquets to be used as accessories, or in long gloves for both daytime and evening. Her basic black sheaths, pared down to the strictest column shape, are given feminine softness by colorful wide cumberbund belts of jewel-toned satin, extra sleeves and tiny boleros.

Little neck scarfs of mink, leopard or ermine are other decorative accessories, lending detail interest to simple dresses.

Dache's glove collection is versatile to the extreme. She goes so far as to design glace kid coats to match trim little shortie gloves of the same material. In another instance she has made gold lame gloves, reaching to the shoulders, meant to be worn with a sleeveless lame evening tunic.

Rich Topknot Prescription Of Hollywood Glamour Gals

HOWEVER casual the hat, it's apt to be elegant this coming season. Dress it down or dress it up, you're still giving the topknot a covering of richness and elan—something that makes you headworthy!

In Hollywood Dorothy Lamour, whose name is synonymous with exotic, cites the elegance of goose quills for a fall hat that's completely stunning. It's a brimmed cap, slanted down over one eyebrow, with elaborately curled black goose quills, pricked with bright stones, making a frame for the head. Her heirloom diamond solitaire earrings repeat the keynote of brilliance.

Joan Bennett, who is letting her hair grow back to an inch or two below ear-lobe length, chooses the coiffure-concealing slant of a black velvet cap whose brim dips upward on the left, downward on the right, with a coarse black chin veil marked with brilliants at the crossing of the mesh. This theme of brightness is echoed in diamond-studded button earrings.

BETTY HUTTON adopts the dashing and popular Spanish motif in a jeweled pillbox that tilts upward fore and aft, its pink velvet base embroidered in deep yellow stones, its visor made of gold mesh. Its glitter is reemphasized by dangle earrings of yellow diamonds.

For Patrice Munsel, devotee of casuals, it's a tweed felt roller, the rolled brim cushioned and double, taupe mesh veiling tied closely under the chin, and a gilded crescent at the brim repeated in diamond-studded gold crescent earrings.

It's black velvet and aigrettes for blonde Dorothy Kirsten, a small hat with an upstanding brim to frame the face, the aigrettes sweeping sideward in back of the brim and down to a brush-effect at one side. Earrings that are clusters of pear-shaped diamonds make a perfect accent.

JOE STAFFORD makes a dashing lady toreador in a profile cap of rust-toned velour whose thickened edges dip into points that curve outward from the cheeks, with intricately worked black braid and tassels for adornment. Her earrings are antique rose-cut diamonds set in heavy old silver.

Brides Steal Center Of Society's Stage

By Elizabeth Maguire

LOVE'S IN BLOOM and there are brides everywhere: brides-to-be, brides-today and brides-away on a honeymoon.

From Wilmington we have news of a wedding which took place yesterday. Miss Jean Jacquot Dawson became the bride of G. Prew Savoy, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Savoy of Washington. The ceremony was a quiet one which was held earlier than planned as the bridegroom is expected to be called into service.

The couple are honeymooning in Maine, and after September 11 they will be at home at the Lancaster Court Apartments in Wilmington. Only members of the immediate family attended the wedding in Sacred Heart Church, and the small reception which followed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Dawson of Wilmington.

Mr. Savoy is a scion of the Townsend family of Delaware. His mother is the former Miss Lyla Townsend, daughter of Delaware's former United States Senator and Governor, J. G. Townsend of Bridgeville.

Takes Bride in Portland

RICHARD DWIGHT LUNN of Washington took a bride August 21 in Portland, Me., the former Mrs. Carolyn Enid Bleyden Brown of Philadelphia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bleyden of Philadelphia. The couple will make their home in Auburn, Me.

Mr. Lunn is the son of Mrs. Wallace H. White, jr., wife of the former Senator from Maine, and he is the uncle of Miss Nina Lunn. During the Eightieth Congress, Mr. Lunn served as Senator White's administrative assistant and later he was associated with the Inter-State and Foreign Commerce Committee of the Senate. He is an alumnus of Princeton University.

The bride recently returned from a year and a half in Germany and France where she was employed by the European Recovery Program. She attended the Maret School in Washington and was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania.

Will Marry in September

WEDDING BELLS will ring in mid-September for Miss Mary Oehl Bauernschmidt, whose engagement to Joe Lancaster Graham has been announced by her parents, Rear Admiral and Mrs. George William Bauernschmidt. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McDonald Graham of Chapel Hill, N. C., and La Grange, Ga.

The bride-elect was graduated from Greenwood School, Ruxton, Md., and she attended George Washington University and the Corcoran Art School. Mr. Graham is an alumnus of the University of North Carolina.

Ambassadors Honored

TWO United States Ambassadors who will leave soon for their new assignments were honored guests at a dinner party Tuesday night. Hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Max O'Rell Truitt, and the party was given at the Carlton Hotel. Honorees were the new Ambassador to Greece and Mrs. John Peurifoy and the Ambassador-designate to South Africa John G. Erhardt and Mrs. Erhardt.

Among the recent parties for bride-elect Elizabeth Curtis was the shower Tuesday evening given by Mrs. Harry W. Proctor of Arlington. Miss Curtis will be married September 16 at the Church of St. Francis de Sales to Myron F. Haussener.

Among guests at the shower party were the bride-to-be's mother, Mrs. Anna M. Curtis; Mrs. Frank A. Robe, jr., Mrs. John Driscoll, Mrs. E. Stuart Lyddane, Mrs. David Meade, Mrs. John E. Nevin, Mrs. Edwin Wren, Mrs. Roy Ingoldsby, Miss Katherine Franke, Miss Carolyn Franke, Miss Anna T. Collins, Miss Anna Marie Burke, Miss Ruth Meehan and Miss Vanita Clair.

Hessler

MRS. ROWLAND C. W. BLESSLEY was Miss Florence C. LeMan before her marriage yesterday at the Foundry Methodist Church. She is the daughter of Mrs. F. Crockett LeMan of Washington and Lloyd D. LeMan of Coral Gables, Fla. The bridegroom, an Air Force lieutenant, is the son of Col. and Mrs. R. C. W. Blessley of Santa Barbara, Calif. The newlyweds will make their home in Arlington Heights, Ill. The bride was employed at the Capitol as secretary to the Financial Clerk of the Senate

New Philanthropic Group to Launch Fall Activities

ATAC, Inc. (Aid to all Charities) will open its program this fall on September 7, with a cocktail party at the Cairo Hotel, 1615 Q st. nw.

ATAC, Inc. received its charter in June. The purpose of the party will be to introduce to the new members the aims and ideals of the organization. The newly formed group hopes to further the humanitarian and philanthropic interests of people and deserving charities of all faiths in the Metropolitan area. Contributions to any charity will be presented in the form of a concrete gift.

The officers of ATAC, Inc., are, president, Mrs. Samuel Blavitt; first vice president, Mrs. Abe Golden; second vice president, Mrs. Harry Evry; treasurer, Mrs. Sidney Kline; recording secretary, Mrs. David Goldberg; financial secretary, Mrs. George Ginsburg; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Harold Hurwitz; publicity editor, Mrs. Bernard Salisbury.

Miss Rhoda Low Betrothed To George Bond Cochran

MISS RHODA LOW, well-known in Washington and Newport society, is the bride-elect of George Bond Cochran of Philadelphia and Washington. The engagement was announced yesterday by Miss Low's brother, William Gilman Low of Liddell's Mill, Mendham, N. J., and Bristol, R. I.

Miss Low is the daughter of the late William Gilman Low of New York, Tuxedo Park and Bristol, and Mrs. Howe Low of Chestnut Hill, Pa. Her grandfather was William Gilman Low of Brooklyn Heights, N. Y., who married Lois Robbins Curtis of Boston.

Miss Low was graduated from Miss Chapin's School in New York, and was presented to society at the Colony Club by her great-aunt, Mrs. Seth Low, wife of a one-time president of Columbia University and later, Mayor of New York.

Mr. Cochran is the son of the late George Cochran and Augusta Hay Cochran and a brother of Douglas Hay Cochran and the late Countess George Ginoux de Fermon. He is a member of the Metropolitan Club, the Army and Navy Club, the University Club and the Chevy Chase Club.

Stucker

MRS. RICHARD W. JOHNSON, the former Miss Margaret Mailander, was married yesterday at the Central Methodist Church in Arlington, Va. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Mailander, and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Bessie Johnson

Two From District Attend Convention

Mrs. Desmond Murphy and Miss Mary Jane Fritz are representing the Washington Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Epsilon at the seventeenth national conclave which was being held August 21 through August 23 at the Congress Hotel in Chicago.

Miss Ann Comm is president of the alumnae group here and Mrs. Desmond Murphy is president of the first province. Chapters in 15 colleges and universities are represented among the membership in Washington.

Pan-Arcadian Women Hear Countrywoman

By Nicha Soure

PAN-ARCADIAN women from all over the United States took time off from their business sessions yesterday to view a fashion show and hear a talk from one of their countrywomen.

An organization of former citizens and descendants from Arcadia, Greece, the Ladies Auxiliary is meeting at the Statler Hotel for its nineteenth annual convention in conjunction with the men's organization.

Guest speaker at the luncheon meeting was Dr. Dora Papara, assistant medical director of the State Mental Hospital in Athens, Greece. Dr. Papara has been studying at the University of Pennsylvania and will continue her research work at Yale University in the fall.

An honor guest at the luncheon was Archbishop Michael of the Greek Orthodox Church of North and South America who came from New York to attend the convention.

In her impressions of American women, Dr. Papara has found that movies had given her the wrong ideas. Now she has a deep respect for American women. In Greece, she said, if a woman does housework, she doesn't have a career. But in America, a woman takes both in her stride.

Dr. Papara said she is amazed at the educational opportunities of United States universities and the generosity by which they allow foreign scholars to use their facilities.

Barbecue Set for Sept. 16

Northern Virginia Women Plan Benefit for Hospital

A group of Arlington, Alexandria and Fairfax County women interested in the furtherance of welfare and health activities in the Northern Virginia area have banded together to assist the Arlington Junior Chamber of Commerce in the completion of the new Anderson Orthopedic Hospital.

The group will sponsor an old-fashioned barbecue on September 16, to be held on the grounds of the hospital, now in process of erection on Army-Navy drive in Arlington. The hospital has been built almost entirely with voluntary labor, materials and funds contributed by the citizens of Arlington and the surrounding Virginia area.

Those attending the barbecue, proceeds from which will be used for equipping the new hospital, will have a chance to inspect the building, now fast nearing completion.

It is hoped to make the barbecue, to be held from 4 until 8 p. m., an annual affair, since eventual plans call for an outpatient department and a rehabilitation center, as well as the 40-bed hospital now under construction. Orthopedic cases such as will be cared for in the new hospital often require long-term treatment and, ultimately, specific vocational training for complete rehabilitation.

There is a great need for additional hospital facilities in Northern Virginia and the new hospital will provide a haven for patients who have suffered infantile paralysis, spastic paralysis, chronic bone infections, arthritis, spinal deformities or injuries, and various neuromuscular disorders.

General chairman in charge of the barbecue will be Miss Henrietta Strobel, who has spent her life in the service of others, both as a registered nurse here and in Baltimore, and as a medical missionary abroad, always interweaving along with her professional services a multitude of voluntary welfare activities.

Perfect Chocolate Chiffon Pie Easy to Make

The ingredients are two one-ounce squares unsweetened, grated chocolate; one-half cup hot, double-strength coffee; one tablespoon unflavored gelatin; one-fourth cup cold water; three egg yolks; three stiff-beaten egg whites; one cup sugar; one-fourth teaspoon salt; one teaspoon vanilla, and one 9-inch baked pastry shell.

Melt the chocolate in the hot coffee. Soften the gelatin in cold water and add. Stir until gelatin dissolves. Add egg yolks beaten light with one-half cup sugar. Add the salt and vanilla and cool.

Beat the remaining one-half cup sugar into the egg whites. Fold into the chocolate mixture. Pour into the cooled, baked shell. Chill in the refrigerator until firm, at least four hours.

Crown your masterpiece with big spoonfuls of sweetened whipped cream. High, rich, fluffy—and chocolate. What a pie!

Is a Wife's Position So Enviable, Asks Girl Whose Married Love Recently Dropped Her With No Warning; She Felt He Really Cared for Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Three years ago I met a married man with whom I subsequently had an affair that continued until recently. A month ago he stopped calling, and while I felt deeply humiliated at being dropped, I also felt profound relief at being freed from a degrading association.

At the onset of our meetings, Joe told me how deeply he loved his wife, to whom he has been married for 10 years. He said she was sexually cold, however. Is this a stock excuse for infidelity? In spite of his story, I somehow felt he really loved me; and in our last few meetings he seemed more devoted than ever. Why, then, would he suddenly shut me out? Even though I am relieved that he did, I have a natural curiosity to understand why. Perhaps another woman and a new affair? I rather doubt that.

Joe had a religious upbringing, which may account for the contempt and inconsideration he displayed towards me at times. Due to this factor, I never expected that he would leave his wife for me; and truthfully I can't say whether I loved him or not. I felt so debased in the alliance that I could not formulate a positive feeling for him. I was driven to seeing him, whenever he asked, firstly by mutual sex attraction and secondly by my failure to meet single men I would really like to know.

I am 26 and unmarried and, believe me, I have learned a lesson. This was my first affair of the kind, and never again shall I get involved with a married man. But tell me, is a wife's position in such case so enviable? Can a man philander through several affairs and still maintain profound love for his wife? Is his record for "the woman of his choice" the reason why he feels none for a paramour? If he seeks other women because his wife is cold, why can't he learn to love the woman who meets his need? Perhaps he does, without facing it? What do you think? Y. C.

Girl Asks Wrong Questions

DEAR Y. C.: You are misspending your energies in trying to fathom men's motives for philandering, their emotional valuation of wife versus paramour, etc. It is much more important to your salvation to observe and correct the distortions in your psychology that have been isolating you from the good life of wholesome companionship. However, this mistake of looking in the wrong direction for light is characteristic of your neurosis.

For the most part you were desperately joyless in the affair. You felt debased, degraded, humiliated, etc., in relation to Joe; and you piteously read religious significance into his sometimes contemptuous inconsiderate manner with you. All of which means that your attitude towards self is chronically sick. You hate and despise yourself, with a creepy sense of nameless guilt about something,—a traumatic condition usually established by severely critical, emotionally "rejecting" treatment from family authority in formative years.

The personality thus afflicted instinctively shuts himself out of his own thoughts, as a subject or figure too noxious to contemplate. He may be fearfully self concerned, as you are, to the extent that he cannot feel positive interest in anyone else. But even so, he won't venture a steady receptive look at himself, lest unimaginable horrors face him back. And in conflicted struggle to keep his mind off self—the supposed "abomination of desolation"—he manifests great curiosity about others, in a jumbled, kaleidoscopic way.

Philandering Man Rejects Love

THIS wasn't a case of losing self respect in the recent relationship. Rather, the affair came about because you've grown up feeling unworthy of average blessings and decent breaks. That is why you grabbed the crumbs of ersatz-love offered by Joe, who was exceptionally vicious in his sneering treatment of your lonely, abject spirit. This aspect of his misconduct can't be ascribed to religious character in its true sense, which is rich in compassion for the outcast and needy. Such manifestation of malice is simply an overflow expression of his own chronic self contempt.

A philandering husband doesn't profoundly love his wife. He simply identifies her with mother or nurse or caretaker—somebody who keeps the home for him, and is a talking point for dismissing paramours, whom he disparages in his heart because he thinks they're so like unto himself. The philanderer is running from a thoroughgoing love relationship with any one woman, because it signifies ignominious captivity, humbled ego, etc., to him. As to whether his wife's position is so enviable, I should imagine the honest answer from her viewpoint is "No."

Prepare Child For New Baby's Arrival Early

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

THERE should be some preparation for the coming of a new baby in the family. In the case of the only child, the adjustment to this event may be prolonged. Where there are several children each one of them, though in diminished degree, must accommodate himself to the idea of a new baby.

This is an excellent time to tell children about how babies are born. Up to about three and a half or four years it is very possible the child may not notice the mother's enlarging figure and would be unaware that the new baby was in this intimate way related to her. The older child will be sensitive to change and so should be made aware that the baby is growing inside of the mother.

But the real preparation for the event is not information but to help the child accept his new place in the family. If he is an only, he has been without a rival. Now, since a rival is on the way, he has to develop a sense of his new privileges as an older child, quite as well as the privilege of having a brother (or sister), in order to make the medicine palatable.

To this end, the mother should enumerate the new privileges. There will be a tiny baby t love. N to play with—as may be told—for the disappointment is shattering when the baby proves too fragile for companionship. But the baby is helpless; the older child is helpful, and Mommy's helper, too.

There is the matter of going to bed at a later hour now that he is a big boy. Daddy and he can share companionship that may be denied the baby.

Both Daddy and Mother should make an effort to do more for the child, read to him, tell stories, take him on trips, all to point up the advantages of his new position as older child.

Meanwhile, parents should not laugh at noses out of joint but try to see the new experience from the viewpoint of the child. It can be a tragedy, if handled wrongly, and one cannot avoid all feeling and evidences of jealousy, even if one manages cleverly.

But, if the older child is eased, not thrust, into his new position and the parents are aware of the probable causes of misbehavior, the adjustment should be speedy and the new status accepted without bitterness.

Your Figure, Madame

New Look and Outlook Spice Middle-Age

By Ida Jean Kain

THE average woman, it seems, doesn't mind getting on in years half so much as she minds looking her age. So here's high-priced advice, for free, from New York's Eddie Senz, internationally known makeup consultant and a wizard in the art of looking young.

What many middle-aged women need, says our expert, is a new outlook on life and a new and attractive appearance that inspires security. "Generally speaking, the married woman of 50 whose children have gone, becomes lonesome and bored," he points out. "The single woman on the other hand, is concerned about keeping her job—competition compels her to keep looking young. My advice to the woman of 50 is to think and look young, yet be careful not to dress too youthfully."

So gather round, ladies, for the keeping-young hints passed along by Eddie Senz . . .

"The right hairdo is very important. Keep it soft—that's more flattering than tight, tiny-ridged waves which give a set look. But do not wear it in a page-boy or a glamour bob, for that's too great a contrast. And don't have the notion you can't change the styling just because you've always worn it a certain way. A new way will give a lift."

Change Hair If It Helps

AS FOR grey or greying hair . . . "If it's a mental hazard, have it changed back to your natural shade," advises Mr. Senz. "Not the bright blonde or brown or deep black you had at 16, but approximately the shade it would have been if it had not turned grey."

Makeup should liven up fading skin to es . . . replace lost color. Our authority recommends a bright dash of lipstick, and rouge in moderation—but no pink makeup or lipstick with an orange or purple cast which may be too harsh after 40. "In applying rouge, blend it in gently and fade it out gradually. Avoid too much pancake makeup, and use a foundation cream well-blended, instead. Hold the skin taut so the cream does not settle in the tiny wrinkles and accent them. Blend eye makeup in gently too. Eyebrows should not be too thin," he cautions.

Choose a flattering neckline. To give the illusion of length to a short, plump neck, the V neckline and deep ovals are excellent. A collarless dress with a V neck and a clip placed at the base of the V "slims off" 5 pounds. For the long thin neck, the most flattering line is high, emphasizing roundness—choker beads, a collar or a scarf will give the desired effect.

Brighten Black With Color

"TO CAMOUFLAGE figure faults, the basic black dress is good," says Mr. Senz. "But solid black is aging, so always add a splash of color close to the face—a gay hat, a scarf, a collar or a weskit to make the skin look brighter and younger."

And what about mental outlook in this business of keeping young? "There are two types of women," says our expert, "those who mature and those who grow old. The first is young at 40, 50, 80 and on. She accepts the passing of time for the new experiences, the new interests it brings. The second type, afraid of aging . . . of greying hair and a changed figure, often worries herself into the psychiatrist's office."

Many such cases are sent to Eddie Senz for the therapeutic use of beauty—he is a man who has made over lives as well as faces.

BEFORE AND AFTER: Hair style, necklines and the way cosmetics are used make all the difference in the age you look, says makeup expert Eddie Senz.

Seed Pods and Leaves Can Be Dressed Up to Replace Summer's Floral Bouquets

IF THE cool days we've had recently make you "feel like fall," perhaps you're pondering the same question as Mrs. C. J. C., of Silver Spring.

DEAR ANNE:

Could you please give me the best text on making winter bouquets from seed pods, grasses, cones, magnolia leaves, etc. I would like to know something about the painting and dyeing of these and about methods of fastening them together for arrangement.

Mrs. C. J. C., Silver Spring, Md.

The Technology Division of the Central Public Library here in Washington has among its books a new one called "Winter Bouquets with Color—The Art of Arranging Dried Flowers." It is by Faith Tuttle Fannon and was published in 1949. There's also a chapter on dried flowers in "Flower Arranging for the American Home," by Gladys Taber and Ruth Kistner. Leaves, weeds, grasses and seed pods are discussed in these books, as well as flowers.

A recent query about a "compound, such as wax" for mending ninon or dotted Swiss curtains has netted these two replies:

DEAR ANNE:

The answer to mending sheer curtains is clear nail polish. I have repaired a ⅜ inch hole in metal window screen which has "held up" three summers. I reapply each spring.

A bit of sheer cloth should be applied in case of curtain. In the screen the polish alone was enough. Mrs. L. R. N., Washington.

DEAR ANNE:

Here is an answer to your reader's mending problem which can be found in any drug store. It is the antiseptic preparation that forms a clear, skinlike covering over cuts, abrasions and minor skin injuries.

It is recommended by its manufacturer as a mending tissue for "chiffon, tulle, net, marquisette, gauze, voile, hair nets, veils, silk, cotton, linen and wool materials."

Florence A. Ryan, Route 2, Woodstock, Va.

DEAR ANNE:

In regards to the lady who had troubles with her ice box odors, we learned that in our case the fault lay in the materials used in a new refrigerator we recently purchased The company had to take the box to their shop to remove the offensive part. I believe it was the adhesive or glue used near the door. The servicemen told me they had several complaints of this sort, all caused by the same thing, but it was harmless to the food other than causing the odors.

Mrs. P. E., Silver Spring, Md.

DEAR ANNE:

For some time I have been looking for a recipe for good, old-fashioned kosher dill pickles—but to no avail. The kind I have in mind tend to grow quite soft and have a little more than average amounts of both dill and garlic. Can any of your readers provide such a recipe? Mrs. P. E. H., Alexandria, Va.

Has anyone a dill recipe that will deliver the taste and texture sought by Mrs. P. E. H.?

DEAR ANNE:

I have been selected to cut the wedding cake at a wedding reception. It is a three-tier cake. Will you please tell me the proper way to cut it? L. B. G., Falls Church, Va.

The cake cutting should begin with the bottom tier. Usually, the first slice is cut by the bride who shares it with the groom, then turns over the cutting job to someone else. Make straight perpendicular thrusts with the knife—a series of them to carve off each slice. If you bring the knife blade down like a lever, it may meet with crumbling resistance on the part of the cake. Proceed upward tier by tier as you serve the cake.

PETUNIA!

And hang 'em and sigh,
No one has dreadfuller
Problems than I!

You wouldn't have poked that hole, Petunia, if you had put a thimble over the end of your curtain rod before you pushed it through. Next time, try it.

Montgomery County Thrift Shop Sets Fall Opening

The Montgomery County Thrift Shop, 4715 Hampden le. in Bethesda, will reopen with new hours on September 5.

Opening every week day at 10 a. m. the shop will close at 6:30 p. m. on Thursday and Friday, at 2 p. m. on Saturday and on other days at 5 p. m.

Customers wishing to sell seasonable clothing and household furnishings on consignment may bring them opening day and every Tuesday from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m.

Donations of cast-off clothing, small furniture and bric-a-brac will be especially welcome, according to Mrs. Clifford N. Rodlun, who is in charge of the fall opening.

All proceeds of the shop are used for welfare projects of the Chevy Chase Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution; Women's Auxiliary of Suburban Hospital in Bethesda; the Planned Parenthood League of Montgomery County and Women's Board of Montgomery County General Hospital. Twenty-five percent of commission sales goes to Thrift Shop agencies and 75 percent to the customer.

MacArthur's Former Stepson Struck Her Says Rogers' Kin

Miss Rogers Brooks

New York, Aug. 23 (U.P.)—A former stepson of Gen. Douglas MacArthur was arrested early today on charges that he beat the late Will Rogers' pretty daughter, Mary, as they sat in a parked car on Park ave.

But the charges of simple assault against Walter B. Brooks, 36, were dismissed at his arraignment when Miss Rogers refused to prosecute.

Police received a telephone call about 12:30 a. m., reporting cries for "help" coming from an automobile parked at 60th st. and Park ave. Patrolmen found Miss Rogers, 33, a former movie actress, with a bleeding scalp wound. She said Brooks had struck her with his fists. She was taken to Metropolitan Hospital, where several stitches were taken.

Brooks said he only pulled her hair. He spent the night in jail.

Brooks is the son of General MacArthur's first wife, Mrs. Louise Cromwell Brooks MacArthur, daughter of Philadelphia Socialite Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury. Brooks' mother married MacArthur in 1922, after her marriage to Walter Brooks in 1911 had ended in divorce. She divorced MacArthur in 1929.

Brooks himself has been married three times, to movie actress Jacqueline Wells, to Jeanne Meagher, daughter of socially prominent Mrs. James H. Snowden, and to Mrs. Helen Beadleston Engel. His first two marriages ended in divorce.

Jailers Fight Off Mob Seeking Tennessee 'Hex-Slayer' of 2

Sheriff Bradley Blair said at least two men were wounded in the gun battle which erupted around the Hawkins County jail here in the early morning darkness. The mob of 300 fled as State highway patrolmen raced to the scene.

Between 15 and 20 shots were fired as the crowd stormed the jail to get Carl Walters, 40-year-old mountaineer held without bond in the slaying of two women he claims had "put a hex" on him.

The gun battle broke out when the mob swarmed onto the jail porch and shook the door, demanding Walters. A deputy fired a shotgun through a window and members of the crowd returned the shot.

The throng fell back and surrounded three sides of the jail. Bullets flew back and forth for about 10 minutes, then the mob faded away.

Blood was found at the jail entrance and around a corner. Grover Compton, 35, of nearby Kingsport, was arrested later at a hospital with minor shotgun wounds. Blair said the two traces of blood indicated another man was wounded.

It's Boy Baby At Home of Stokowskis

New York, Aug. 23 (U.P.)—Gloria Vanderbilt Stokowski, the center of a sensational custody wrangle in the 1930s, gave birth to a son last night, it was disclosed today.

The 26-year-old heiress bore a six pound, 14-ounce boy to her husband, 68-year-old orchestra conductor, Leopold Stokowski, in New York Hospital. It was her first child in two marriages. Stokowski has three other children, now adults, by two previous marriages.

Friends said the socialite beauty was determined to give her child what she, for all her millions, never had—a childhood of security and serenity.

Gloria was married to Stokowski in 1945 in Mexico.

The dynamic Stokowski was divorced from his first wife the year before Gloria was born. He and his second wife were divorced in 1937 after nine years. Gloria's first marriage to the Hollywood actor's agent, Pat Di Cisco, ended in divorce.

As the wife of the flamboyant di Cicco, Gloria came in for frequent publicity. But Stokowski permitted no personal publicity during their marriage.

In the same pursuit of privacy, Gloria was admitted to the hospital under the name of Mrs. Laura Green and even nurses were barred from her room.

The birth of Gloria's son made the former international glamor girl, Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, a grandmother. Gloria's mother fought with the late Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney over Gloria's custody and subsequently with Gloria, herself, over money.

Waitress Asks Aid of Estate Of Rich Father

Houston, Tex., Aug. 23 (U.P.)—The waitress-wife of an unemployed cab-driver hired a lawyer today to see what could be done about the will of her millionaire father who cut her off without a cent.

Mrs. Barbara Cullinan Waller, 29, who said she's a waitress in a Baton Rouge, La., cocktail lounge, was left out of the will of the late Oilman Craig F. Cullinan, who she said left an estate worth perhaps $40,000,000.

She said she and her father never spoke after she divorced her first husband, J. H. Pittman, jr., of Houston, in 1948. She said the rift with her father started when she married Pittman in 1939.

She now is married to Taxi Driver J. W. Waller, 35.

Her father, head of the Republic Oil Corporation, was found shot to death at his home last week. His death was ruled a suicide.

The will said Mrs. Waller had been provided for adequately, that she had been given a home, education and income bearing securities.

Mrs. Waller said the securities were 10,000 shares of corporation stock valued at $330,000 and held in trust but that income from them came to less than $1000 a year.

She also said her daughter, Nina Judith Pittman, now 10, was given to Mr. and Mrs. Cullinan, sr., when she was divorced.

"I signed papers giving complete custody to my father and mother. Now they are dead and nobody will tell me where my daughter is," said Mrs. Waller.

"But I'm going to get her back if it costs me every dime I have." Under Cullinan's will her daughter was left $25,000 in trust.

Hendricks Treated Same as Others, Warden Reports

Homer R. Hendricks, 50, former Washington tax attorney, is being treated like any other prisoner, the warden of the Maryland State Penitentiary in Baltimore said yesterday.

Hendricks, paroled a month ago from the penitentiary where he was serving a 10-year term in connection with the slaying of his wife in 1946, was taken into custody Friday night at his home, 5515 Hampden ln., Bethesda, Md.

Parole authorities said he had threatened to kill himself, had threatened members of his family and that later, in the Montgomery County Jail, had tried to end his life by biting open his wrists.

Although members of Hendricks' family have said the former tax attorney is in extreme need of psychiatric care and should be sent at once to a mental institution, Warden Edwin T. Swenson of the Maryland Penitentiary said yesterday it is not thought he needs any special care.

"He'll be kept under surveillance just like any other prisoner, of course," said Swenson.

NLRB Chairman Takes Oath Today For Second Term

Paul M. Herzog, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, will be sworn in today for a second five-year term, in a brief ceremony at 9:30 a. m. in the auditorium of the Federal Security Administration building north.

Judge Charles Fahy of the Federal Court of Appeals for the District, former general counsel of the NLRB, will swear in his one-time boss.

Herzog, who marked his forty-fourth birthday last Monday, had twice expressed a desire to retire for personal reasons, but accepted renomination to the NLRB post at the urging of President Truman.

NORTHWEST PARK APARTMENTS

Offers Private Living Similar to Your Own Home

On New Hampshire Ave. Extended, North of University Lane

Ready for Immediate Occupancy

EXAMINE THESE FEATURES. COMPARE THEM WITH OTHER APARTMENTS, AND BE AMAZED!

1. Private entrances, and broad, private terraces for family living, face a whole mile of cool, wooded parkland.
2. Twenty individual spacious layouts of one, two, and three-bedroom units, some with bedrooms upstairs.
3. An unusual roadway system provides safety for children, with one-way traffic, and brings the car to your own front door.
4. Almost half the units are end units, with sun, air and long views on three sides.
5. Masonry walls between units provide complete soundproofing.
6. Stair-climbing reduced to a minimum, as private entrances (70 percent of total) enter directly at ground level.

Wounded Yank Recalls 'Minute'

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter
(Fourth in a Series)

As any combat veteran knows, things get confused and mixed up when there's fighting going on. A fellow gets hit and doesn't even know it. Or maybe he finally realizes that he's been wounded, but he doesn't have the foggiest notion of precisely when it happened.

That's not the case of First Lieut. Saul Resnick, 27, of Brooklyn, N. Y., now recovering at Walter Reed Hospital from wounds suffered while serving with the Twenty-fourth Division in Korea.

Ask Saul what time of the day it was when the mortar fragments pierced his shoulder and paralyzed his hand and forearm, and he'll snap back: "At 7:29 a. m."

Watching Yak Dive

Resnick would tell you:

"I was watching a Korean Yak dive out of the clouds onto the tail of an American artillery observation plane the morning of July 19 near the airstrip outside Taejon. As the Yak went into a spin, I automatically looked down at my watch. It was 7:28 a. m.

"One minute later I was hit by the fragments of a mortar shell."

Lieutenant Resnick, jabbed with morphine to relieve the pain, fell into a drugged sleep on the jeep carrying him back to the medical station. A jolt along the road awakened him in time to discover that the jeep driver had lost his way, and had taken the wrong direction at the fork—toward the enemy lines. A few well chosen words, uttered in haste, inspired the jeep driver to change his course.

Wanted to Be a Sailor

Looking back, it's ironic that Resnick should have been slogging it in mucky terrain. He always wanted to be a Navy man. He almost was an Air Corps man. He wound up—and was wounded—in Korea's miserable mud.

After finishing Brooklyn's Erasmus high school, Saul looked around for an appointment to Annapolis. But no dice. So he fooled around for a year with engineering at Brooklyn College before settling down to City College of New York and an accountancy degree. Saul was hardly out of CCNY when he was drafted in 1943 and assigned to the Army Air Force.

LIEUT. RESNICK

Next thing Saul knew, he was sent to Amherst College to compete with GIs from every theater for special appointments to West Point. Saul proved that his six-foot-four frame carried more than 200 pounds of avoirdupois and spent the next four years at West Point.

Lieut. Resnick had 13 Army branches to choose from, decided on the artillery. After extensive training in this country, Saul was assigned to the Twenty-fourth Division in July of 1949. A year later he was in war.

Wondered About Future

Lieutenant Resnick was not taken by complete surprise when war broke out in Korea. The officers in his outfit had often, in Japan, discussed the possibilities of the future.

"Being so close to Russia, we considered the possibility of war on a personal basis," explains Resnick.

"Our general feeling was that communism was a force which the United States sooner or later would have to combat. Therefore, we resented and grew increasingly bitter against the American communists who we felt were deliberately attempting to weaken our country at a time when it should be strong."

The West Pointer recalls that junior officers and the men alike believed at first that the orders to go to Korea did not involve "the real thing." The Yanks figured that the North Koreans might be invincible so far as fighting the South Koreans was concerned but that the Red Koreans would fold up and flee when they saw the first Americans in uniform.

As it turned out, during the four retreats and one advance participated in by Lieutenant Resnick before he became a casualty, the North Koreans proved to be worthy foes—especially when they outnumber the GIs 30 to 1.

Not Fanatical, He Says

Resnick believes that all the talk about the North Koreans being fanatical fighters devoted to the holy crusade of communism is so much poppycock.

"We found the Koreans, North and South, to be for the most part an illiterate, ignorant peasant people," Resnick says.

The North Korean troops didn't seem to care so much about communism as they did about getting three meals a day. Another inducement for the Red Korean soldier was presence of the "People's Court" which has a way of getting Koreans to enlist under the Red flag."

Despite his youthful ambition to be a sailor, Resnick has gotten to like the Army life, wants to stay in. His big worry right now is that his arm will not heal so that he could remain in active military service

Meanwhile, he's got another item on his mind—though it's not what you would call a worry. In Japan, the lieutenant met a Red Cross girl named Barbara Miller of Fremont, Nebr., at a party last Christmas. Last June they decided to get married in July—but the Korean affair interfered.

En route back to the States, the wounded lieutenant was briefly reunited with his bride-to-be at an Army hospital in Japan. Barbara is due back in these parts sometime in October. It can be logically expected that nuptials will follow shortly thereafter.

Baltimore Hotels Hike Rates

Some Baltimore hotels have announced increases in their room rates and Washington hostelries are considering whether to follow suit.

Hotel officials here said yesterday, however, that they knew of no local hotel where increased rates have been put into effect.

In Baltimore, the Lord Baltimore Hotel increased its room rates 50 cents and the Sheraton Belvedere raised rates for some rooms but not for others.

One Washington hotel official said prices for some supplies have risen astronomically." He said most local hotel men would like to keep prices down, but that in the present rising market hotels would soon lose money on room rentals.

Benny Planning 8 TV Shows This Fall

By Syd Kronish

NEW YORK (AP).—The guy with the fiddle, the Maxwell and the safety vault in the cellar is all set to hit the TV screens this fall. Jack Benny, one of America's greatest comedians, will be seen over CBS-TV once every eight weeks starting the end of October—probably October 29. His radio show will continue as usual every Sunday night over CBS, resuming September 10.

IT SEEMS like only yesterday that little 12-year-old Peggy Ann Garner was starring in "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn." Now a pretty, blue-eyed girl of 18, Peggy is going to star in her own radio show for NBC this fall.

Peggy

It will be a weekly half-hour series called "Meet Me in St. Louis," and will have a teen-age tang. The story will be based on the Sally Benson yarns, which originally appeared in the New Yorker. The Judy Garland movie of the same name was also based on the Benson pieces.

NBC is also planning a TV show for Peggy. It will be called "My Sister Eileen," based on the Ruth McKenney book.

She left Canton, Ohio, with mama and papa for Hollywood when she was only 4 years old. After doing many child roles in the films she was offered a lead part in "National Velvet." It was with another studio, and her own movie company wouldn't release her to the rival set. Elizabeth Taylor got the role instead. Peggy's studio gave her the "Tree Grows in Brooklyn" part shortly thereafter.

In recent years she has done summer stock, guest shots on radio and TV and a couple of Broadway plays.

From a 9 a. m. Breakfast Club program to a 9 p. m. night club program goes Don McNeill. The evening show will be a one-hour television variety program, starting September 13 over ABC. Featured with McNeill on the new video setup will be Sam Cowling, Aunt Fanny, Johnny Desmond, Patsy Lee and Eddy Balantine's orchestra.

The Radio-Television Manufacturers Association has financed publication and distribution of the report on an intensive survey of television's effect on attendance at sports events. The survey, made by Jerry N. Jordan, graduate student at the University of Pennsylvania, indicated television is not harmful to sports attendance in the long run. It showed that in most cases, when a person first gets a set, he goes less often to sports events, but later attends oftener than before.

THE University of Chicago announces a fast servicing of the texts of its radio Round Table (Sundays, 1:30 p. m., NBC) to wire services and daily newspapers from coast to coast.

Its new system utilizes dictaphone time-masters which record the extemporaneous broadcast on plastic memobelts. Two hours after the program is over the wire services, leading columnists and newspaper bureaus receive the text of the scriptless program.

"For the 20 years the program has been on the air," reports George E. Probst, director of radio for the university, "it has been a source of news. This innovation in news reporting now assures the public of getting the whole story accurately, and faster than ever before."

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Dear Boss:

As we drove westward out of Charleston, W. Va., we noted that the speed limit for autos was posted at 50 miles per hour, but the limit for trucks was 30.

An informal survey between Charleston and Huntington revealed that almost every trucker obeyed the law—when he was going uphill.

At Milton, about half way between the two cities, we paid 31 cents a gallon for gasoline. A few miles further on, in Ohio, it was 25 cents.

Huntington seemed little changed since the last time I was through. International Nickel and the big Chesapeake and Ohio railroad shops are familiar landmarks, and the Prichard Hotel lobby still boasts a piano (which guests occasionally play, believe it or not).

Incidentally, I bought several newspapers at the lobby newsstand, and had to pay a penny sales tax on them. I don't know of any other State in which sales taxes apply to bona fide newspapers.

At the Waffle Shop across the street from the hotel, we found a modern, attractive restaurant in which gleaming stainless steel was much in evidence. Juice, steak, potatoes, salad, home-baked apple pie and coffee came to one dollar a meal.

We crossed the Ohio River at Huntington, to avoid the heavy traffic through Kenova, Catlettsburg, and Ashland on the West Virginia-Kentucky side of the river.

Just outside Chesapeake, on the Ohio side, we passed "Wet Your Whistle Inn." West Virginia taverns sell beer, but the hard stuff must be purchased from State stores and consumed elsewhere. Ohio bars sell whiskey-by-the-drink, (but you can also get bottled portions of the same medicine from State stores).

At South Point, Ohio, we passed one of the biggest industrial plants we've seen. It's the Solvay Process Division of Allied Chemical and Dye Corp. I seem to recall some building activity at this point during the war years, but I never paid much attention to it until today. Now there's acre after acre of coal piles, railroad tracks and cars, pipe lines, buildings, parking lots and mountains of equipment of all kinds. To a fellow whose mechanical ability just barely sees him through the ordeal of changing a tire, it's all mighty impressive.

In Ironton we saw the gigantic Semet-Solvay plant, which is another division of Allied Chemical. And in New Boston, the Wheeling Steel Mill was going full blast, as it has been every time I've ever been past it, except in the depths of the depression.

New Boston, incidentally, reminds me of Norwood, Ohio, in one respect. Driving in on Route 52, one first comes to the Portsmouth city limits, then to New Boston, and then to Portsmouth again. Norwood, similarly, is completely surrounded by Cincinnati — yet it's a city of some 40,000 inhabitants.

From Huntington all the way down the Ohio valley we found constant reminders of the great floods which have ravaged the region. Years of talk about flood control found these river towns almost completely without protection when the Ohio went wild in 1937, causing millions of dollars worth of damage.

Now concrete flood walls protect both banks of the river in urban areas, and line even the smaller creeks and rivers that flow into the Ohio. And for good reason.

When the main stream is swollen, these small tributaries rise at a frightening rate—sometimes a foot an hour—and overnight back up a destructive lake of water that sends residents of nearby houses scurrying to their attics for safety.

I know it looks funny to see those news pictures of people sitting on their roofs as debris goes floating past (invariably with a chicken perched on an egg crate) but as radio's Molly would say: It ain't funny, McGee.

Back home, a muddy trickle of water known as Mill Creek used to shoot up a score of feet in less than a day whenever the Ohio passed flood stage. Thousands of people who lived in the Knowlton's Corner area (many miles from the river) would be driven from their homes by a ridiculous little creek which was two parts smell and one part water.

Today as you follow the Ohio down Route 52, you can see the walls which were built to keep these small streams from devastating the countryside. As you cross them at right angles, you see slots in their sides—ready-made for the addition of sections which would complete the flood wall, at the cost of blocking off the highway.

It was long past dark when the amusement park lights at Coney Island loomed up on the left, a cop in a parked scout car scowled at our 40 mile-an-hour just-off-the-highway-and-ain't-slowed-down-yet speed, and we knew we were home.

Across the horseshoe bend of the Ohio, we could see the outline of the Union Central Life Insurance Company's "skyscraper"—tallest west of New York when it was built—and next door to it the newer Carew Tower; with its Netherland Plaza Hotel reaching 45 stories into the humid Cincinnati air.

Down Columbia pkwy. the Pontiac seemed to want to go a little bit faster, but I held it to a legal 25 because if there's anything Cincinnati has plenty of, it's beer and policemen—and the policemen frown on speeding.

We stopped at a drug store, and I called my mother. "You're just in time for dinner," she said. "Come right on out."

"It's after 9 o'clock." I protested. "What time do you people eat?"

"You've been away for so long, you've forgotten," she sighed. "In this house, you're always just in time for dinner, 24 hours a day. We've got everything but curb service."

She runs quite a house, that mother of mine. I'll tell you more about it tomorrow.

Beryllium Workers Warned of Danger

The Bureau of Mines has warned industry to be careful of health hazards in handling beryllium, a metal used in some copper alloys.

Beryllium first was used extensively in World War II in making electrical contacts, clips, small springs, and other metallic parts. Some workers handling it developed toxic reactions in the lungs and skin.

Doctors have found no specific treatment for the poisoning, so the bureau said emphasis must be placed on preventing it.

To ward off beryllium poisoning, the bureau suggested that plants processing the metal prevent dust from gathering on floors and rafters, install high-velocity ventilation and filter the air before it is discharged outside,

Early Recall of Malik Predicted

(While Drew Pearson is on a brief vacation, his column is being written by members of his staff.)

By Tom McNamara

Look for Jacob Malik, Soviet delegate to the United Nations Security Council, to be recalled to Moscow right after his term as President of the Council expires on August 31.

Malik

Insiders say that Malik's mission to the U. N. ended with our smash-victories in the Changyong area last week, which wrecked the "timetable" the Russians have been using in Korea and at Lake Success.

This secret timetable, we have learned, called for Communist capture of the whole of Korea by August 15. Later, the deadline for driving all U. N. forces from Korea was changed to September 1.

Meantime, Malik's mission at Lake Success was to press for a Soviet-dictated peace treaty for Korea when the final blow was struck. As part of the bargain, Russia also would demand recognition of Communist China by the U. N. and the ousting of Chiang's representatives

However, now that the tide of battle has turned and we are in Korea to stay, Malik's usefulness at Lake Success has ended. He will undoubtedly be recalled to Moscow and the inside betting is that he won't return.

Washington Notes

It costs the taxpayers about $75,000 a day to keep Congress in business . . . A little known Government official, Nat Keith, director of the Government's slum clearance program, is doing an A-1 job cleaning out big city tenement areas—the most vulnerable death traps in a bomb attack . . . Representative Manny Celler's Monopoly Committee will begin probing patent conspiracies by certain big war contractors . . . Capitol reporters have decided that the term "pork barrel" doesn't do justice to the big, one-package appropriation of 27 billion dollars for domestic spending. Reporters call it the "silo" bill . . . Waiters in the House Restaurant—where Congressmen eat—still are paid the pitiful wage of $27 a week.

'Ordinary Man'

When Representative Clement Zablocki of Wisconsin introduced a constituent, former Federal Judge Stephen McMahon of Wauwatosa, to President Truman the other day, McMahon reported that he had now shaken hands with every United States Chief Executive since McKinley.

"I should be used to it," he added, "but I'm always awed on occasions like this."

"Well, now you are convinced that I am just like any other ordinary man," grinned Truman. "A President has no right to think himself better than the millions of people who elect him—any one of whom might be in his place."

Annexation of Poland

Three Polish diplomats who recently quit the Polish Embassy in Washington and begged asylum in the United States have warned the State Department that Russia plans to annex Poland formally within a year. This will be done, the Poles revealed, by staging mass demonstrations and holding a mock plebiscite. . . . Pentagon generals believe the mass B-29 raid on north Korean troops was a tactical blunder. The raid stunned the north Koreans, but the Americans failed to follow up with a swift infantry attack. . . . The Communist Daily Worker has ordered its reporters to "race angle" all their stories on the Korean war. However, the Negro magazine, "Ebony," will declare in a forthcoming issue: "Today's conflict is no more a 'war of color' than was the last one when the Communists fought with us, not against us. It is a battle between two political concepts in which color is not involved." . . . The Communists beat the propaganda drums about segregation, but live under a rigid caste system themselves. Inside the Soviet-controlled embassies in Washington, non-Communists aren't allowed to eat at the same table with Communists.

'No Dead Whip'

Story behind House Whip Percy Priest's blast at Secretaries Dean Acheson and Louis Johnson—which drew a hot counterblast from the President—is that Priest was under terrific pressure from veterans' groups to tee off on the Cabinet members.

On his return to Washington, following renomination in the Tennessee primary, colleagues asked the former Nashville Tennesseean reporter why he had stuck his neck out for a White House rebuke.

Note—Speaker Sam Rayburn and House Majority Leader John McCormack have assured Priest that he will continue to be a "live" whip, No. 3 job in House Democratic ranks.

Small Business

While the Defense Department is paying lip service to small business, little companies still get the runaround when contracts are ladled out.

For example, here is what happened to one little outfit, J. H. Phipps Lumber Co. of Fayetteville, Ark., which wanted to make truck bows for the Army:

Phipps tried to submit a bid through the Detroit arsenal, but couldn't even get the specifications needed for estimating the cost. The Detroit arsenal explained that Chrysler corporation had all the blueprints containing the specifications. When Phipps asked to see them, Chrysler corporation refused.

In other words, though the Army theoretically invited competitive bids, it was impossible for any company to bid on the truck bows except by grace of the Chrysler Corporation.
